JAIL OUTBREAK AGAINST CHILD SLAYER FEARED

Life of Hickman Menaced by Prisoners—Hearing Awaits Attorney's Arrival.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28.—(INS)— Los Angeles officials are not to be misled by the apparent calm that settled over the city with the jailing of William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of little Marion Parker, it was announced today. The iron guard will be maintained with ceaseless vigilance.

Within two hours of Hickman's return here yesterday from Pendleton, Ore., where he was captured, he was hailed before Superior Judge Carlos Hardy to answer the murder and kidnaping indictments. The case was put over until tomorrow pending the arrival from Kansas City, of Attorney Jerome Walsh, who will represent the young slayer.

Meanwhile jail officials are uneasy over their responsibility of guarding the prisoner. They fear two things.
One is an attempt at suicide by the prisoner. The other is attempts at violence on the part of other jail inmates.

Prisoners Hostile
Feeling against Hickman today was reported as running high among the prisoners. Threats against his life came to the ears of Jailer Dewar. It was reported that prisoners had been found fashioning clubs out of broomsticks they had purloined.
All cells were searched for articles which might be used as weapons.

Hickman has declared he will stand by his confession and plead guilty, irrespective of what advice may be given him by his attorney.
Officials here take small stock in such declarations, however. They ty defense is advanced.

Frightened to Death
County Autopsy-Surgeon Wagner reported to Coroner Nance his opinion that strangulation was not the primary cause of the death of the Parker girl. Examination of the body gave no particular indications of this, he said.

He expressed his personal belief that fright had killed the child, that her heart had stopped when, upon Hickman placing the towel around her neck, she realized what was going to happen to her.

The Parker girl, Wagner said, was a very nervous child, and the agonies of her captivity had worn terribly upon her.

Hickman today was quoted as saying he was quite willing to repeat the details of the crime to Perry M.
Parker, father of the victim.

RAMBO RELEASED

Case Dismissed When Witness Fails To Appear

Because Otto Halley, the man who was separated from $17 last Monday night, failed to appear when the case was called in the police court
Tuesday evening, "Scram" George Rambo, whom he accused, was discharged from custody.

Rambo was also exonerated of the suspicion of entering the Gem restaurant, which was relieved of $108
Monday night.

This money, instead of being left in the cash register, had been secreted in the front portion of the restaurant, among some cigar boxes.
Evidently when the proprietor, Mr.
Myers hid the lucre, he was seen by someone, who made it his business to get it, when the proprietor left the place. "Scram" was suspected on account of his being the last customer in the restaurant that night.

HEAVY MAIL GOES THROUGH OFFICE

The postoffice, during the holiday rush of last week, sent out 15,000 holiday greeting cards daily for three days. The rush simmered down Friday and Saturday. The Christmas mail was much heavier than last year, but was distributed throughout the week, and did not discommode the mail clerks, who put in extra time taking care of the overplus of mail. All mail, both first and second class was expedited and gotten out on scheduled time.

MANY CATALOGUES SHIPPED BY FARM

The Triangular Mercantile farm shipped this week 17,000 catalogues through the mail. Besides covering the Union, shipments were made to 18 foreign countries. Among the farthest countries, were Siam, South Africa and New Zealand.

NATIONALLY KNOWN SPEAKERS LISTED

Agricultural Experts Will Speak
At Sessions of Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Dr. William E. Dodd of the University of Chicago, Chris Christensen of the division of cooperative marketing of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and secretary M. S. Winder and Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of the American Farm Bureau Federation are among the speakers at the annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, first announcement of the program of which has just been received at the office of the Pick-away County Farm Bureau. The meeting, the ninth in the history of the organization, will be held in Columbus on Monday and Tuesday, Jan.
30 and 31.

As in past years, the meeting comes the first two days of Farmers' Week at Ohio State University. Unlike other years, however, sessions of the second day of the meeting will be attended by delegates and members of the organization at a down town hotel, with only the Monday sessions at the University.

"Shall American Farmers Become Peasants?" is the topic on which Doctor Dodd will speak. Mr. Christensen will speak on "Fundamentals of cooperation."

Reports of the year's work will be given at the opening of the meeting
by President L. B. Palmer and Executive Secretary M. D. Lincoln. Legislative activities and needs of Ohio farmers will be discussed on Monday afternoon's program by O.
C. Gray, Speaker of the House of Representatives and C. A. Dyer, legislative agent of state farm bureau and grange.

Adoption of policies and program for the coming year will be the chief concern of the delegates at the Tuesday sessions of the meeting. At this time resolutions offered by various county farm bureaus will be discussed by all delegates.

Every county in Ohio is expected to have representatives at the meeting.

REMUS WITNESS TO FIGHT CHARGE

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 28.—(UP)— John S. Berger, Los Angeles fair promoter indicted for perjury in connection with the George Remus murder trial, today prepared to appear the decision of Criminal Judge Chester R. Shook who found him guilty of contempt of court. Berge, is at liberty under $1,000.

Berger was fined $250 and sentenced to ten days in jail for circuting a petition seeking to have the indictment against him quashed. The petition was signed by the jurors who acquitted Remus. They with Berger, were reprimanded by Judge Shook yesterday.

FARM LEADERS WILL ATTEND SCHOOL HERE

Training Institute Will Be Conducted in Circleville For Township Workers.

More than 100 Farm Bureau workers and leaders from the different townships throughout the county are coming into the Farm Bureau Training School which will be held at the Farm Bureau office in Circleville on Thursday, Jan. 5th.

A systematic membership campaign, staged by the County Farm Bureau to increase its membership, is making unusual progress under the direction of R. E. May, H. O.
Peters and H. S. Lewis.

R. E. May, membership maintenance director of the County Farm Bureau, said: "In pledging our team workers, it is our aim to develop in each township an organization 'set up' through which the Farm Bureau story may be effectively told. The county team school is a step in the preparation of our Township Farm Bureau workers prior to solicitation.

Stand Is Asked
"In soliciting membership," Mr.
May said, "We expect to ask our prospects to take a definite stand upon the following:

"1. Do you believe something should be done to improve present conditions?"

"2. Don't you believe that the burden of work to bring this about should be borne by every worthwhile farmer rather than a few?"

"3. Are you willing to join with other Ohio Farmers and work through the Farm Bureau to bring about this improvement?"

List of Speakers
M. D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau; F. G. Ketner, livestock marketing director of the State Farm Bureau and J. R.
Allyer, field secretary of the state organization will appear on the Training School program and assist the County Farm Bureau leaders in equipping the workers with information concerning the opportunities offered through the Farm Bureau.

Pickaway County Farm Bureau holds an enviable record in organized accomplishments throughout the state. An increased membership is essential to maintain this position.

ENGLISH BLIZZARD LEAVES SUFFERING

Villages Isolated by Snow — Thames Valley Flooded—Shipping Disorganized

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Conditions of suffering and distress thro-out many sections of England resulting from the great blizzard which struck the British Isles over the weekend were still acute today.

Dozens of villages were still isolated by the snow and have not received food supplies since last Saturday.

The Thames river has risen eight feet in some sections and thousands of acres are under water. Authorities fear the worst flood in years when the snow and ice begin to thaw.

In Canterbury, 300 families were homeless after the Stour river flooded its banks.

All Paris to London telephones were down and phone service throughout England generally was badly disorganized.

Fierce gales, continuing to whip
the channel, still disorganized shipping, especially the cross-channel services.

GETS $150 FINE ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Orley Schwalbaugh, arrested last week by the sheriff's department, and charged with having liquor in his possession was found guilty in probate court and was given a fine of $150 and costs by Judge Adkins.

Schwalbaugh was represented by Luther O. Day of Chillicothe, who has given notice to arrest judgment, as the case will be appealed to the court of appeals. In the meantime Mr. Schwalbaugh is in the county jail.

SHANESVILLE, O., Dec. 28.—(U

a bullet through the windshield of Mrs. R. E. Fair's automobile here last night, barely missing the woman. Mrs. Fair is the wife of the Shanesville mayor. She was enroute to Walnut creek at the time.

Wasn't on Submarine

Roger Lancaster Braley, 21, of New-dead in hull of submarine S-4 until it was discovered he'd been discharged from the ship and service two days before undersea boat made its disastrous trip.

REPORTS MESSAGE FROM LOST PLANE

Newfoundland Operator Tells of Hearing "The Dawn's" Radio Signals.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Dec.
28 (UP)—A message from the Western Union at Hearts Content, Newfoundland, last night told of picking up a radio signal asking for location.
The call letters were indistinct although they resembled those of the missing airplane "Dawn."

The message received from the Western Union read:

"One of our operators, Hillyard, reports that yesterday afternoon he picked up on his radio the following signals, W, next either P or six, then the letter U. Following that were the words, 'Where are we? Can you locate us?' That was repeated three or four times for half an hour and came in very loudly, indicating to the receiver that the sending station was within a short range. The operator made no mention of it until learning that The Dawn's call letters were WMU."

NAVAL AIR STATION, Lakehurst, N. J., Dec. 28 (INS)—The Navy dirigible Los Angeles was placed in its hangar here at 1:15 o'clock this morning, after an unsuccessful search off the coast of New England for "The Dawn," the missing Grayson plane.

The dirigible appeared over the field at 11:35 p. m. and landed at 12:30 a. m. The airship patrolled the "ocean graveyard" from Cape Cod to Emerald Banks, about 170 miles southwest of Halifax, and then started back again.

According to Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, who was in charge of the ship, the Los Angeles covered about 1,200 square miles in its search. Two United States destroys, the Mahan and the Sturdiv-ant, assisted the search from below, sailing fifteen miles apart.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 28.—Certain in his own mind that he was just one step from absolute freedom,
George Remus appeared today before Judge William H. Leuders in probate court for an insanity examination.
When Remus was acquitted last week of murder in the killing of his wife, Imogene, Oct. 6, the verdict acted as a lunacy affidavit against Remus since Remus was acquitted on the sole ground of insanity.

GUATEMALA IS GOAL OF LONE EAGLE'S TRIP

Mrs. "Lindy" Also Leaves Mexico
City in Plane on Return Journey to Detroit.

BULLETIN

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28.—Col.
Charles Lindbergh arrived at Guatemala City at 2:45 o'clock (Circleville time) according to word received here from the Guatemala capital. Word also was received of the safe arrival in Brownsville, Tex., of Mrs.
Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the aviator, on her return flight to Detroit.

VALBUENA, FLYING FIELD, Mexico City, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Setting forth on another mission of good will, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off in the Spirit of St.
Louis at 6:35 a. m. today.

After a few hours of flight across the mountains and jungles of southeastern Mexico he hoped to arrive at Guatemala City, the first of several central American capitals on the air ambassador's calling list.

Lindbergh arrived at the field at 5:35 a. m., before the chill December dawn had come to light his way.
He was accompanied by Dwight Morrow, United States ambassador.

Loses Little Time
The flier lost little time it getting to his plane. He began to putter around it and shortly after 6 a. m.
the mechanical part of the "WE" combination was rolled from its hanger.

Five hundred persons were at the field and the crowd increased with the approach of daybreak. Six flourishings were trained on the field.
The flight to Guatemala meant another farewell for the aviator and his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, who came here from Detroit to spend Christmas with her son.

Mother at Field
Mrs. Lindbergh and Mrs. Morrow were together on the field and the former planned to leave on the return flight to Detroit as soon as Lindbergh should disappear over the mountains.

Lindbergh circled the field once and then roared off, soon disappearing.

Seven other planes arose to join him and all ten craft were out of sight in two minutes. The escort planes intended to go only a few miles, leaving Lindbergh to travel his solitary way most of the 675 miles to Guatemala City.

Lindbergh hoped to arrive in the early afternoon.

Weather conditions were in his favor. There was a slight haze at the foothills but clear, blue skies could be seen above the distant mountains.

FACES DANGER
But even with perfect weather the flight afforded danger. Conditions over the terrain to the southeast are little known and Lindbergh will have had few predecessors on the aerial trial to Guatemala.

He will pass no large cities, if he remains to the route he outlined at the American embassy here and much of the time he will be over jungle country where a safe landing would be almost impossible.

However he seemed to consider the flight no more perilous than several overland trips he has made, notably the one over the Rockies at night between San Diego and St. Louis while on his way to New York for the trans-ocean flight to Paris last spring.

There was no formality in the takeoff today. Lindbergh bade good-bye to his mother and friends he met at the embassy. He shook hands with General Alvarez, who represented President Calles, and then climbed into his plane.

He waved his hand to the crowd as he taxied down the field for a long start and then arose quickly.

MOTHER LEAVES
After bidding her son good-bye on his flight to Guatemala City, Mrs.
Lindbergh today started back to the United States in the Ford-Stout airplane that brought her here for a Christmas reunion with Col. Lindbergh.

The plane bearing Mrs. Lindbergh and her party left the ground at 6:56
a. m. (Mexican time), a few minutes after her son had hopped off toward Central America.

Two escort planes started north with the Ford craft.

Mrs. Lindbergh intended to make the trip back to Detroit by more or less easy stages, with Tampico, the first stop. She hoped to reach her home Friday night.

FRENCH SCARCE ALONG RIVIERA; WINTER DIFFERS

Wealthy Visitors Have Driven
Natives Away From Hotels
and Casinos.

By ALICE LANGELEIR
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NICE, FRANCE, Dec. 28.—What's the hardest thing to find on the Riviera? It's a Frenchman, according to a certain motion picture producer now directing a film which shows why wine is much cheaper than water in sunny France.

He needed French and American types. The latter were very easy to find. All he had to do was sit for half an hour in front of any one of the numerous Riviera cafes. He found any number of perfect national American types.

Then he began to comb Nice for the perfect Frenchman. After two days he found one who had the characteristic little goatee and moustache but he was a hunchback and had to be photographed from a special angle to hide his defect. The movie producer managed to use him, however. He was obliged to or else not produce his film.

Wealthy winter visitors and the subsequent high prices have driven the real Frenchmen into the hills, away from the palace hotels, and Casinos. Then too, those who do remain behind in constant contact with tourists of the Riviera, lose their identity and adapt the manners, clothing and language of the predominant foreign type—that is, the Anglo-Saxon.

The story runs that one native who remained behind became so nervous hearing nothing spoken but English, German, Dutch, Russian and Danish that he staggered up to a French gendarme and begged: "For God's sake talk, I want to hear some French!"

The man who invented the story about Isadora Duncan's fatal shawl being bought by a rich American girl who wore it as a charm and won large sums of money at the Casino on the Riviera, has now gone to jail as the result of another unpleasant joke. He dined and wined well one evening in Nice and then told the proprietor that he had no French money, but would pay him with a big German note. It happened to be a five thousand mark bill, but a bit out of date. The proprietor then thought it was his turn to play a joke and called in the police.

This is turning out to be one of the most unusual winters the Riviera has ever seen. Although the days

Nursing Record In Two Continents Hard to Equal

Nurse Waite of New Brighton writes: "After fifty-five years of tireless labor nursing mankind, I am now retiring. While nursing in New York, in my early twenties, I was poisoned by food, my sister nurse recommended your wonderful CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. The doctor told me that I would have died had I not taken the pills."

I am never without them and have prescribed them for thousands of my patients who were suffering with indigestion, gas and sour stomach, biliousness, sick headache and constipation. These pills are indeed a wonderful laxative, being purely vegetable, small and easy to take, children, as well as older people can swallow them easily."

Orphan Children Quote Chapter And Verse

In an appeal for continued support of the Near East Relief's educational work overseas, the refugee children of its orphanage at Corinth, Greece, spell out a reference to Paul's Epistle to the inhabitants of this same Greek city. The verse quoted says: "We would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble, which came to us in Asia, inasmuch that we despaired even of life. . . But God delivered us from so great a death, ye also helping, and for the gift bestowed upon us by many persons thanks should be given on our behalf." The photograph is being used in thousands of schools and churches in connection with observance of Golden Rule Sunday for the Near East Relief work.

have been slightly grey, the weather has been so mild that the bathing-beaches present a gay mid-summer scene, with men, women and children taking their daily swim. Even the mosquitoes have remained to enjoy the good weather and not a few fair limbs give good proof of it.

The numerous American destroyers who anchor off Cannes or Villafraiche from time to time keep the cafe-keepers busy shining up their fronts. One ingenious owner has four different portable fronts to his bar and four different sets of awnings. It makes no difference whether French, English, American or Italian boats come to port. All he has to do is to shift his scenery and voila! a cafe which will suit any sailor. For the moment the French tri-color is waving in the breezes, but within a week's time it may become the United States flag or John Bull's favorite haunt.

BRITISH FILMS TO MAKE FIGHT ON HOLLYWOOD

German and English Firms Sign
Reciprocal Agreement in Movie Business.

By J. C. OESTRECHER

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Another step in the campaign of British film producers for worldwide distribution of their pictures in competition with Hollywood, has been taken with the signing of an important reciprocal agreement between two British and German film interests.

The contracting parties are the Gaumont-British Picture Corporation the largest firm of its kind in England, and the UFA, the famous German and distributing organization.

According to the terms of the agreement, which takes effect next April, the Gaumont-British company will distribute German films in the United Kingdom, while the UFA will market English films in Germany and Central Europe.

Important Agreement
Cinema circles here look upon the agreement as of the utmost importance, insofar as it will provide Great Britain with its first opportunity for the distribution of its films in Germany. With this as a nucleus, the British producers hope to extend their scope throughout the world, with the hope of giving the American producers the first real competition of their lives.

This is the first time that a British company has been able to negotiate an "output" contract on such lines for a Continental market. It is deemed especially important at the present time because of the new German "Kontingent" legislation, which will so restrict importations that even the largest American companies will be able to import only a very small number of films, unless "kontingent" is found for them by German film companies.

To Exchange Artists
The UFA company, according to the agreement, will supply the "Kontingent" necessary to admit the Gaumont-British films. The agreement furthermore allows the British company to have a voice in the activities of the German company, and to be present on the studies during productions.

It is planned also from time to time to exchange artists, so that British players may learn the German technique and vice versa.

It is pointed out that the agreement is a trading treaty only, and involves no financial merger or joint capital interest between the two concerns.

VILLAGE CLAIMS YOUNGEST MAYOR

NORTH KINGSVILLE, O., Dec. 28.—(INS)—This village boasts the youngest mayor in Ohio. He is Harold Fowler, 26, and available records indicate that such an office never has been in the state by a man so young.

Running as an independent, after friends had started a boom for him, Fowler was elected over the former incumbent.

The "boy mayor" is married and has a son.

GIRL WILL RECOVER

MARYSVILLE, O., Dec. 28.—(INS)—Nora Virginia Leach, 14, who fired a bullet into her breast with suicidal intent, rather than go to school, three weeks ago, has been removed to her home from the hospital here. Physicians say she will recover though the bullet pierced her right lung.

MINERS FEAR DISTILLERS

NEW LEXINGTON, — Dec. 28.—Several coal operators at Shawnee and New Straitsville have appealed to the local and state prohibition officials to make further efforts to clean up the illicit traffic in southern Perry county in idle mines. The owners fear fire.

Clemenceau Sad Over Death of Loved Brother

PARIS, Dec. 28.—(INS)—"The Tiger" is not smiling these days. Monsieur Clemenceau is very sad over the recent death of his brother, Albert, whom he loved more than any other person now living.

The difference of twenty years in their ages was enough to make the ex-president really play the part of the elder brother. All through his life he had watched over and protected "Little Albert." He felt certain, however, that he would be the one to leave this old world first so he made his brother the executor of his will and counted upon his to arrange all matters after his death.

This is the second bereavement for Clemenceau within a few weeks his sister having died only recently.

DARBYVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Grabill and family were entertained to a Christmas dinner at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Lehman, of Columbus. This is Mrs. Grabill's first Christmas in forty-two years to be spent away from Darbyville.

Mrs. Milton Carpenter and children, Harry and Mary Frances, spent Christmas with relatives in Fostoria. Mr. Alva Hott and Miss Anna Sample, of Ashland, were Sunday guests of his brother, Mr. Harry Hott and family.

Mr. G. W. Miller had Christmas dinner with his son, Dr. Miller, of Columbus, and was accompanied home by Mrs. Miller, who spent the previous week there.

Mrs. George Alexander and daughter, Florence, of near Lancaster, returned home after spending Christmas with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Hott.

Miss Sadie Hoover is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Clarence Curtin, of Circleville.

Mrs. Mary T. Miller entertained her children to Christmas dinner.

Mr. Leon Shelton is visiting his relatives in Gallipolis.

Mrs. E. J. Mullock spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Charles Alkire, of Cook Station.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hill entertained the Porter-Hill families to the annual Christmas dinner. This was also their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Mary Miller, Wednesday, Jan. 11. Mrs. Pearl Smith will assist.

The Muhlenberg teams again defeated the Scioto teams. Score: Girls, 9-3. Boys, 44-20.

The Alumni teams will play the Muhlenberg teams, both boys and girls, Friday evening, Dec. 30. Derby boys will also play our second team of boys.

The pageant, "The Sign of God," given by the members of the M. E. church, Sunday night, was very well presented to a large and attentive crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hott, of Ashville, were Sunday guests of her father and sister, Mr. Henry Hill and daughter, Elizabeth.

Dolores Huffer, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delano Huffer, is recovering from a severe case of intestinal grip.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Downs and family spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Scott Redman and family, of near Derby.

NEW EQUIPMENT FOR KANSAS CITY HOTELS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 27.—(UP)—New silverware, linens and equipment in general will greet delegates to the Republican national convention in Kansas City next June at the various hotels and cafes.

William M. Symon, convention bureau manager of the chamber of commerce, has announced that virtually all Kansas City establishments that expect to entertain part of the host of delegates have placed orders already for new equipment so they may suitably handle the increased business.

SPANISH-AMERICAN VETERANS TO MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 28.—(UP)—National officers of the Spanish-American War Veterans will be guests in Miami, Jan. 20, prior to a visit to Cuba with the Cuban ambassador to the United States. While here the officers will be entertained by the John J. Pershing Camp, of Miami.

The mission of the officers will be to make arrangements for the national convention of Spanish-American War Veterans which will be held in Havana in October, 1928.

FAIL TO SAVE BLACK PRINCE'S CARGO OF GOLD

Efforts to Salvage $15,000,000 in Precious Metal Again
Defeated.

BALAKAVA, Crimea, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Efforts to salvage $15,000,000 in gold from the British Cruiser "Black Prince," which sank off Balaklava during the Crimean war, have failed again. The turbulent Black Sea still clings to its mysterious treasure horde which has tantalized gold seekers for more than a half century.

Five pieces of gold represent all the luck that Japanese divers have had in four months of laborious effort before they abandoned the job as hopeless.

They scooped away 2,000 tons of sand and rocks so as to effect an entrance to the vessel. They spent nearly $100,000 and all they got was the five unique souvenirs.

Four of the gold coins are British and bear the inscriptions of George IV and the dates 1821 and 1823. The fifth is a Turkish piece, valued at about $100. The issue value of all the coins was one pound. The fact that the pieces were found at the bottom of sand which covered the decks of the sunken boat leads to the belief that the chests in which the gold was carried to pay the British forces fighting in the Crimea, were cracked open by the waves and the money washed over the bottom of the sea.

Soviet experts, however, are confident that the gold is still below the decks of the cruiser. They expect to organize another diving expedition.

The Japanese undertaking which failed was begun under the concession plan last July. The agreement contemplated a 50-50 split between the Japanese salvaging firm and the soviet government of all the booty up to 1,000,000 rubles. Beyond that the Soviet government was to get 60 per cent.

ROBTOWN

The date of our next Aid meeting has been changed from Thursday, Jan. 12, until Saturday night, Jan. 14, so as not to interfere in any way with our revival services, which will begin Sunday night, Jan. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Rob Hott and family spent Christmas Day with Mrs. Hott's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde White in Circleville.

Miss Viola Wolford was a Christmas visitor of relatives in Chillicothe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Neff, of near Mt. Sterling, were Christmas guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Row and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ned Bell had for Christmas company, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Bercher and family, of Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Bertha Clark entertained to a family Christmas dinner, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Florence entertained to a family dinner on Christmas Day.

Our Christmas program was somewhat handicapped on account of Miss Marjoria Johnson being ill. Miss Johnson was one of the main committee, but nevertheless, it was carried out as well as was possible under the circumstances.

There were a few from our community who attended the Christmas program at Darbyville, Sunday night, and all say, "It was just splendid." It seems impossible for any program to have been any better.

WOMAN, 100, SAYS "DO NOTHING BUT LIVE"

SEDAN, France, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Here is the secret of long life, according to Madame Hoty, whose passing the century mark was the occasion of an official celebration here: "Don't worry. Do nothing but live. Don't indulge in foolish ambitions. Be content with what you've got."

Mme. Hoty was born in Sedan, Nov. 30, 1827. Her husband, who was born in 1821, died at the age of 78. She was an eye-witness of the revolution of 1848, the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71 and the Great war, many of the battles of which were fought around here. Mme. Hoty reads several newspapers every day without glasses and talks entertainingly on a host of subjects. She has an excellent appetite.

BRITISH APPEAL FOR GOOD MEN AT AMSTERDAM

Lord Rochdale, Former Noted Athlete, Wants Strong Teams at Games.

By F. A. WRAY
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Dec. 28.—Lord Rochdale, chairman of the British Olympic Association, and former noted athlete, is making a strong appeal for funds to ensure strong British representation at the 1928 Games at Amsterdam.
“Great Britain,” says Lord Rochdale, “is at this great disadvantage that, having won the war, and having paid the debts resulting from it, she is the only nation which cannot afford State contribution towards any national or international sport.
“Fortunately, France, Italy, Germany, and the other smaller countries have been able to make large payments which have almost relieved the responsible authorities from any contribution at all.
“It becomes imperative, therefore, that the British public should personally help if they wish Great Britain to maintain her proper status in the Olympic Games.”
For Financial Aid
Lord Rochdale adduces the main arguments in his plea for financial support for British participation.
“Amid all the inherent disasters of the war,” he says, “we may perhaps count as an asset for good the fusion of international feeling and a scene of the value of sport and games.

“Not only has it come as a physical regeneration, but as a civilizing and progressive factor. It would be most valuable if there were an accurate account of all the nations progress in sport since the great war.
“Take two examples only: Germany’s organization and minute thoroughness, formerly directed to military expenditure and preparation, now flow in ever-growing volume into the channels of sport. Elaborate playgrounds have sprung into being all over the country by the direct exertions and expenditures of the Government.
“The German representatives on the International Olympic Committee, Herr Lewaldt, a member of the German Cabinet, told me that two hundred representatives from all over the country were being taken for a tour throughout Germany, with sleeping carriages and every convenience, to be made acquainted with these preparations for physical development and sport.
“Mussolini, in Italy, has been not less active in his program for athletics and tennis for every Italian. A large stadium has been erected at enormous expense at Bologna, to be followed in due course by others in various parts of Italy.
“In Africa so far this spirit spread that there are to be African Olympic Games in 1929 among every State, colony, mandated territory and dominion and $150,000 has already been collected of which King Fuad has contributed $15,000 and a magnificent Stadium has been made at Alexandria.
“Amid this revival, then, and missionary effort for sport all over the world, the British Olympic Association has been called on to make its decision whether or not it should take part in the ninth Olympiad at Amsterdam in 1928.
“The British Olympic Association

decided to compete. It is now necessary for the British public to provide the funds.”

Paris Style Hints

By ALICE LANGELIER
PARIS, Dec. 28.—(INS)—
Madame will probably “muff” it again this winter, according to the smart dressmakers and furriers who are bringing out fashionable combinations of fur and cloth to keep the hands warm and cozy.
They are not the simple, unadorned muffs of old, but a perky frivolous version which comes as an adjunct to any chic costume and helps to set the whole thing off. One model to accompany a tulle-trimmed black wool comes in half moon shape and it made of the fabric and astrakhan fur which makes the high turnover collar. It has a smart moire bow at the top and still another has a flower placed in the center of the bow.
Any fur is used to make the muff, but preferably the closely-shaved ones which are so popular this winter.
And along with the minuscule muff has come the latest idea of a masculine necktie. Replicas of this, very much elongated and made in the finest silk, promises to be extremely fashionable to wear with coats trimmed with shawl collars.
For afternoon wear one of the dressmakers is creating these tie-scarves in a lame mixed with wool, while for morning, or to go with heavy tweed coats, they are made in smart checks or designs, which remain one of little boys’ school ties.
Time is priceless, but most of mankind prefer some sort of remuneration for it.—Bellefontaine, O., Examiner.

Congressman Urges Law To Make Average Man's Dollar Do Better Job

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(INS)—
The Federal Reserve Board will be given the task of making the average man’s dollar buy as much a year from now as it will today, if Congress enacts a law to be proposed by Rep. James G. Strong, (R) of Kansas, a member of the house committee on banking and currency.
“I shall seek enactment of my bill which directs the officers of the Federal Reserve System to use all of their vast powers for the stabilization of the purchasing power of the dollar,” said Rep. Strong.
“If the Federal Reserve System had done this in 1919 inflation would have been checked and the consequent disaster of deflation which wrecked business, forced thousands of banks to close and a million farmers to lose their farms would have been avoided.
“To insure against a repetition of such a calamity I hope that Congress will direct a policy of stabilization of the price level shall be one of the primary duties of the reserve system.”
Strong declared that the Federal Reserve Board already possesses adequate powers to take these steps and that it has exercised a stabilizing influence on the price level in the last three or four years. He proposes, however, that Congress shall make it mandatory upon the board to pursue the policy.

Brown-Mann Wedding

The Rev. Thomas Taylor Crawford of the First M. E. church of Columbus, officiated at the church wedding of Miss Betty Mann of Columbus, and Mr. John Terry Brown of Circleville, Tuesday evening, Dec. 27. Following the church service, a reception was held at the Columbus Woman's club on East Town street.

Miss Sarah Jeanette Brown, of Circleville, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were all sorority sisters of the bride. They were Miss Betty Walker, Miss Martha Hale and Miss Goenna Schlitt, who wore dresses of white chiffon velvet, made sleeveless and with low necks and with crushed satin bows at the waist-line. These bows and the bolero jackets were lined with cerise satin. Their shoes were also cerise and they carried white velvet muffs trimmed with red rosebuds.

Mrs. Harland Jones, the matron-of-honor, and Miss Brown, the maid of honor, who entered the church together wore gowns of cerise velvet, nude hose and cerise satin pumps and carried arm bouquets of white roses.

The bride's mother wore blue velvet, while Mrs. Cary Brown, of Circleville, the bridegroom's mother was in gold lace over jade, and both had shoulder corsages of pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

For the occasion, the altar of the church was banked with Christmas trees, holly and cedar, while poinsettias in tall ivory colored baskets added color to the scene which was lighted with three seven-branched candelabra.

The bride's gown was made of ivory satin in period style with a lace trimmed skirt. The dainty lace veil which fell into a five yard train was held in place by a band of pearls and orange blossoms.

The groom graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1925 and is a member of Tau Beta Pi and Sigma Xi fraternities. He is at present production manager of the Milwaukee Chain and Belt Co. The bride was graduated in June from Ohio State university and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta.

At Dearth Home

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dearth of East Main street, entertained with a family dinner Sunday at noon. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dearth, of Hamilton; Mrs. Margaret Dearth, of Chillicothe, and Mrs. Mary Johnston and Miss Alyce E. McRoberts of Kingston.

Family Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hott entertained to a family dinner Christmas Day, the following guests: Mrs. Geo. Alexander and daughter, Miss Florence, of Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hott, of Harrisburg; Miss Anna Sample and Alvah Hott, of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hott and children, Paul and Mary Frances; Mrs. F. C. Rizer and children, Filmore, Jr., and Bobby, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Clark, of Columbus; Miss Jennie Hott and Doris, Bernice and Harry, Jr. After dinner the Christmas tree was unburdened of its load of presents and each guest received his share, and all agreed to be the guests next year at the same place.

Visit Parents Here

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Root had for their Christmas guests, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar and daughter, Mary Ellen, of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Nichols and daughters, Esther and Gildy, and sons, Robert and Richard, of Obetz Junction; Mr. Ellsworth Root from the western states, and daughter Myrtle; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Root, of Circleville, and Mr. and Mrs. William Sells, of Williamsport. The affair was appreciated by Mrs. Root because of the fact that all her children were present. She was presented with a radio by her oldest son, and received many other presents. The evening was spent in novel games and music.

To Take Cruise

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Albro Blodgett, of Toledo, will leave the second week in January for a Mediterranean cruise. Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who have been visiting here will be gone about six weeks, while Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett will remain for a longer time.

FIND OLD CHURCH RESEMBLING TEMPLE

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—An ancient Roman Temple, has been discovered by Lord Dynevor at his Carmarthenshire seat, Dynevor Park.

The removal of a thick growth of ivy from the south wall of the family church revealed a pointed arched doorway. This led into an apartment built like a cell. The topmost of a flight of five stone steps in the apartment reaches the floor of the present church.

It is on record that in 1800, when the churchyard was being levelled, the walls of a Roman building were found.

TARLTON

Tarlton can boast of one of the finest Community Christmas trees in the whole country. It is a natural growing pine tree, planted in the park by John Zehrung, forty years ago, and has grown into the height of nearly 50 feet and a beautiful shaped tree.

The citizens of Tarlton and vicinity have donated for the purpose of decorating the tree. It is electrically lighted with about 75 bulbs of various colors and all kinds of decorations, with a large white star in the extreme top, with a bulb directly under it, which presents a beautiful sight to behold. On last Saturday night, Santa Claus made his appearance and gave every child in town a pop corn ball and Esquimo pies, which were given by A. M. Shaeffer. Prof. John Macklin made an appropriate address, telling why and how the tree happened to be planted by his grandfather Zehrung, so many years ago. Christmas carols were sung and a program was carried out to the letter, appropriate for the occasion. The tree will be lighted every night this week, including New Year's night. Mr. E. S. Ballard, the promoter, wishes to thank all who donated toward the making up of the fund for the decorating, and invites all in to view the tree.

JACK SHARKEY IS MAN OF MYSTERY

Boston Fighter Keeps Ominously Quiet—Heeney Will Beat Him, Champ Believes.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Quite some few people, including one in particular whom I modestly decline to mention, thought that Jack Sharkey couldn't lose the night he fought Dempsey or whatever it was he tried to do that night. Today, there are just as many who think he can't win when and if he meets Tom Heeney on Jan. 13 and one of them apparently is a gentleman known as Gene Tunney, of whom one hears occasional references.

Mr. Tunney didn't express this view in public. It seems that he darkened the windows, stuffed the keyhole, glanced apprehensively to right, left and rear and, feeling secure against intrusion, imparted the good word to friends, who rushed from the premises in a body to impart it to the first gent they didn't know, who may or may not have been me. Anyhow, it appears that Tunney is looking forward to meeting Dempsey or Heeney or both next summer for the heavyweight championship but not Sharkey.

Partial to Dempsey
In brief and if true, he has something in common with a lot of citizens who have come to look upon the modern Demosthenes as one who is all washed up, even unto the back of the ears.

It seems, too, that Tunney believes they can hold the Dempsey-Sharkey fight all over again for thirty nights a month and that the result would be much the same and even more than that. He is quoted as saying that he regards Dempsey as being Sharkey's master at all times after what happened last July. As to that, some people don't exactly know what happened last July. As to that, some people don't exactly know what happened yet, which isn't the point. Praise from Caesar, however, grudging, constitutes the point in question.

You might say that Tunney loves Dempsey like a brother, only he would have to be somebody else's.

However, the champion is only expressing once again what is a fairly general sentiment, except that it is probable he knows what he is talking about and the expressors of sentiment probably do not. The idea has become bruited about that the Dempsey defeat hurt Sharkey both internally and morally, which is taking in a lot of unexplored territory and only may have been somebody's bad guess in the first place.

May Fool Doubters

The lad may live to fool these doubters. He fooled us before against Dempsey. Maybe he will come out of the silence once again to fool the moulders of public opinion against Heeney.

The source of the doubt surrounding his probably can be found in the fact that he has been ominously quiet these many months. He has said nothing and done nothing and has kept right on doing both and, somehow, the boys cannot figure that one out at a distance. It just doesn't seem right and, in the natural course of human events, the gent has become a man of mystery and an object of very minute scrutiny.

He added to this by having the first Heeney fight postponed. Yesterday, however, his manager, Johnny Buckley, told the boxing commission that Sharkey was ready, which was a rather favorable omen. Heretofore, Sharkey did all the telling and some of the fighting. Perhaps he has become reconciled now to doing only the latter.

Non-Stop Piano Player Tries For New Record Loses Use of a Hand

MURPHY vs. WHITE

By DOC REID

Thirty-five years ago today, Billy Murphy, famous little New Zealand, who once won the diamond studded belt emblematic of the featherweight championship, fought a terrific 32 round draw with Tommy White, famous Chicago featherweight contender, at San Francisco.

White and Murphy were two of the greatest featherweight ringsters of all time and the affair created intense interest in fight circles. Murphy returned to his native country in 1904 and is still living there and in good health.

Anderson, forward and coach, starred in high school with Akron Central, being picked as All-Ohio high school guard. He played three years with Otterbein university and was captain of that team for two years. In college Anderson made the All-Ohio conference forward berth.

Urich, forward, is a fast shifty player and is a product of Lima Central high school and Ohio Wesleyan university. He was leading scorer on his club last season.

Sass, forward and center, starred in his high school days with Lake high in southern Ohio and in college with Salem where he played three seasons.

Glatke, guard, was formerly captain of Woodward Tech high school, of Toledo, who were finalists for the National United States high school championship in 1920. He played three years at Wittenberg university, Ohio conference champions, winning all-state honors.

BANTAM KING WILL MEET OLD ENEMY

Bud Taylor to Step Out of Class to Give Battle To Tony Canzoneri.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Though he is specializing at the present time in dealing to featherweights, Bud Taylor has no intention of forsaking the bantamweight division, over which he rules as champion in all boxing territory controlled by the National Boxing Association.

This does not include New York which is an exception not at all displeasing to Taylor since he can come in here and fight at catchweights, a privilege he would not enjoy if he were recognized as a champion. Under this dispensation Taylor will box his old rival, Tony Canzoneri, at the featherweight limit here next Friday night.

Canzoneri has abandoned the 118-pound class but Taylor says he can and will make that weight any time he is challenged by a worthy rival.

Eddie Long, Bud's manager, declared today that Taylor isn't fighting bantams now because there are no challengers who stand out.

"With Bushy Graham out of commission, Archie Bell just beaten by Kid Francis and Willie Smith taken by Dominick Petrone there isn't a bantam match that would draw any kind of a gate," Long said. "That is why Bud is mingling with the featherweights!"

SPORTSMATTER BY FRANK GETTY EDITED BY SPORTS EDITOR

From England comes the claim of discovery of a new heavyweight with championship possibilities.

It is an old story, but one to which an Englishman will ever lend a sympathetic ear.

If one of her explorers should discover both poles at once, old England could scarcely grant him more acclaim than awaits the discoverer of a British boxer capable of winning the heavyweight championship of the world.

The identity of the latest British aspirant is a closely guarded secret. Just why this should be necessary is not quite clear. Perhaps his backers fear that some third rate American fighter will walk up and slap him horizontal before he has been properly exploited.

It is barely possible that they consider this secrecy useful from a publicity point of view. Perish the thought.

If there were a real heavyweight anywhere in Great Britain he would be crated and rushed to Tex Richard forthwith and C. O. D.

The newcomer is a former office boy. That much, and a little more has been learned about him. Recently he was promoted to be a junior "clerk" in a city office, a position which entitles him to two celluloid collars and a little black "darby" hat, with spats, of course.

The potential champion is not yet 20. He has been boxing for several years, however, and recently stopped three amateurs in a single evening.

The training methods of "Kid X" are as mysterious as his identity. During the lunch hour in the City, several boxers of repute hire themselves to the offices in which the junior clerk is employed and all descend to a basement, where the gloves are produced and the fun begins.

The youngster, it is said, (and this couldn't all be publicity chatter, could it?) takes on the others, one after another, each tiring rapidly under the strenuous attack of "Kid X." One 217 pound heavyweight is said to be unable to stay more than two rounds with our hero.

"Kid X" got his start in this same basement, when only an office boy. A clerk made some slighting remark which the huffy office boy resented, and the pair went downstairs to fight it out with the maulies. It was an easy first victory for "Kid X."

His firm promoted him, and apparently intends to continue to do so.

Jimmy J. Johnston, who doesn't care what he says as long as his name is spelled right, professes to believe that when Phil Scott returns to this country next year the Hackney Wick fire laddie can be made into a first rate fighter.

But it might be well to have Phil take on that mysterious office boy in the meantime.

NORTHWESTERN WILL PLAY IRISH

EVANSTON, ILL., Dec. 28.—(INS)—Northwestern university gets another "crack" at Notre Dame on the basketball court here tomorrow night.

Purple fans are still hopeful that sooner or later Northwestern will triumph over the Irish, something that hasn't occurred to date. Consequently the local quintet is training day and night. Six highpowered flood lights have been installed for nocturnal drill.

Tickets are selling at a premium as only 5,700 spectators can be accommodated in the gymnasium.

Chess Contest Opens In Hastings, England

HASTINGS, Dec. 28.—(UP)—A silent battle interrupted only by the ticking of chess time-clocks commenced here today, not far from the site where 861 years ago helmets clicked at the battle of Hastings.

The congress is scheduled to last until Jan. 6. It is taking place under the auspices of the city corporation who have permitted the use of the Town Hall for the purpose.

Kearns Acquires Baker's Services for Sum of $25,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(INS)—The cauliflower market, which had a bull session with the purchase of Jack DeLaney by Joe Jacobs for $50,000, recorded a further rise today with the announcement that Jack Kearns, the dapper ex-manager of Jack Dempsey, had bought Sergeant Sammy Baker of Mitchell for $25,000.

The purchase of two prominent fighters, neither a champion, for such unprecedented sums within a week, has given the boxing business an unusual stimulus.

Baker, a welterweight who stopped Ace Hudkins of Nebraska, has for some time been regarded as Joe Dundee's most dangerous challenger for the 147-pound title. With Hudkins and Dundee prevented from meeting for the present by a ban imposed by the boxing authorities in California, it is believed that the astute Kearns hopes to force a title fight for his new purchase some time this winter.

GRID OFFICIALS DESIRE CHANGE IN GAME RULES

Football Arbiters Assert Fall Pastime Is Now Too Complicated by Laws.

By FRANK GETTY
U. P. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Football officials, who suffered so much abuse during the 1927 season, gathered today at the Hotel Astor to speak on their own behalf.

There was a time when the men in white knickers who officiated at the leading gridiron games were paid scanty attention by the partisan throngs gathered on respective sides of the chalk-line playing field.

This year, however, changes in the playing rules brought about an unprecedented number of situations in which the rulings of the officials had a most important bearing upon the result of the game.

Protests Aroused

There was the case of the Notre Dame-Southern California intersectional game, for instance, in which the decision of an umpire regarding a fumble behind the Irish goal line decided the contest in favor of the South Bend eleven and led to protests from the Trojans which have not yet died away.

Members of the football officials' association, who opened their annual session here today, blamed the complications of the new rules for their difficulties.

Football, from a game once decided obviously upon the merits of the respective contestants, has come to be a game where a delicate decision may be left up to some perplexed official.

Hairline Decisions

Take the case of the difference between a fumble and a muff, for which the 1927 rules provide.

A muff by a quarterback receiving a punt occurs when the receiver never actually obtains possession of the ball. A fumble occurs when he first possesses and then drops it.

Obviously this requires, on occasions, hair-line decisions by the official responsible, and whatever is decided, players, spectators and occasionally other officials, are dissatisfied.

The question of timing the huddle, the shift and unnecessary delay also troubles many of the football officials who gathered at the hotel Astor today.

Game Complicated

Tom Thorp, Walter Eckersall, Dave Schultz and other well-known officials whose services are in demand for the leading games, were unanimous in expressing the opinion that the game has become too complicated from the officials' point of view and that too much responsibility is placed upon the arbiters.

The officials will recommend to the rules committee, which meets here tomorrow, that the rules be simplified.

In one sense, they will have the entire support of the football coaches association, which also meets here the following day. The coaches, naturally, are not worried about the difficulties of the officials, but feel that the new rules have made the gridiron game complicated to a point where it is difficult to teach it thoroughly to boys of college age in the given time.

TOOTHBRUSHES FOR RED ARMY ORDERED

Russian Command Equips Soviet Soldiers to Raise Standard of Efficiency.

MOSCOW, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Toothbrushes for the red army is the latest revolutionary order issued by the Revolutionary Military Council.

Six hundred thousand toothbrushes, neatly packed in metal cases, with toothpaste or powder, have been purchased by the Soviet military authorities at a cost of nearly $200,000.

For the first time in history the Russian soldier will have to wield a toothbrush as part of the setting up exercises night and morning.

Many thousands of the red soldiers had never seen a toothbrush before. In consequence of this ignorance, the military sanitary corps is being instructed to teach the men how to scrub their teeth.

Officials of the German toothpaste concession in Russia are jubilant. The advertising value of a soldier squeezing paste upon his new brush will be more tremendous than Queen Marie's name upon a string of pearls in the western world.

The toothpaste edict was announced on recommendation of the sanitary council as "an essential part of the program of raising the efficiency

FARMER EVER AT WAR

WHILE farming is apparently the most peaceful of pursuits, in reality the farmer is everlastingly at war. Not with his fellowmen, but with the billions of insects and other animal life which menace his crops on every hand.

The boll weevil, the army worm, the corn borer, the gypsy moth, the cabbage butterfly and other hordes of insects and parasites are working day and night to set his best efforts to naught. And each of these enemies presents a distinct problem.

Without scientific aid in fighting insects, it is asserted by high authorities that in time human life would become extinct. The insects and parasites would completely overrun the earth.

It is some comfort to know, then, that under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture, earnest scientists are working diligently to find better means of controlling these pests, and are meeting with a fair degree of success.

Information of the utmost value to the farmer is available through the county farm agents, bulletins from government sources, articles by experts published in the press, and the example of informed neighbors. He owes it to himself to profit by this information and cooperate with these agencies which stand ready to aid him in his warfare against destructive insect pests.

MARIE LEARNS ABOUT FAME

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD Marie Anttrim, after her brief hour of glory in Chicago, where she was crowned health queen of the United States, is back on the farm in Kingman county, Kansas, her education well under way.

The education we speak of is coming to Marie through the mails, which bring her every sort of interesting whatnot. A tooth paste manufacturer is interested in knowing what kind of tooth paste Marie uses. A health food manufacturer asks her if she ever used the kind his company makes. Congratulatory letters come from here and there, from governors and politicians and health and social organizations.

A number of other Antrims from other parts of the country are trying to trace some relationship with this girl. They want her to tell them about her paternal grandparents and where her paternal grandparent's father was born.

One odd lack noted—there have been no mash notes or proposals of marriage for Marie thus far. Perhaps that is because Marie didn't wear a bathing suit when she was having her picture taken—perhaps it is because her healthy, wholesome appearance, scared away this class of trade.

Marie is taking it all philosophically, helping her mother with farm duties, attending high school, being the same girl she always was, and reading plenty of mail.

WIPING OUT POVERTY

HOPE that poverty would eventually be abandoned, as the result of good management of business and increased production, was expressed by Dean Kimball of Cornell University, at the convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. The tremendous output of our products is abolishing poverty, he said.

To abolish poverty, however, people have to learn to restrain themselves. No family will get far along the road out of poverty if its members are spending money too freely on pleasures, or throwing it away on dissipation. Some people think, if money comes easily for a time, it will always do so. But sad experience teaches that such prosperity is a fleeting thing. The time when money is easily earned is the time to salt much of it away against future needs.

THE OLD YEAR

Now here's
The old
Year slipping
By,
And somehow I can't Help but sigh,
I planned a million
Things to do
But I've neglected
Them all, too—
It's funny how this
Old world goes,
We plant a thorn,
Expect a rose,
We hope for things,
And that is all
We do not hear
Ambition's call
We linger at the Starting place
Forgetting
That
There is a race
And others
Start and win
Their goal—
Ah, we are but
A mournful
Soul!
And so it goes,
The old year
Dies
And leaves behind
A million sighs—
But just you wait,
The coming year
I'll win my point,
And without Fear—

And what we mean to say
Is,
"Just wait!"—you say,
And wait we do,
And we'll be waiting
Each year, too—
The man who says,
"I'll do this thing,
Tomorrow I will Spread my wing!"
Soon finds Tomorrow
Is Today
And that he's failed
Along the way.

President Coolidge Prefers to Watch the Shavings Curl and Fly Back in the Old Vermont Home.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.
United States Senator from New York.

MR. COOLIDGE says he "does not choose to run for President." When asked what he would do on retiring from the White House, his reply was, "Well, I am going back to Vermont and for a year or two I am going to whittle."

DR. COPELAND

If you were born in the country, you know exactly what President Coolidge meant. You know the joy of "settin' around" and just whittling.

No angry, irritated, cross, vindictive person can whittle. It is the calm, contented, right thinking individual who does this. It gives a man a chance to think and dream and compose his soul.

The Presidency is a grueling, exacting, trying, body wracking and mind smashing job. I can well understand that Mr. Coolidge wants a rest. He needs it. It will take a year or two of quiet and many days of whittling to restore his physical vigor and rest his tired brain. I sincerely hope the President will employ his first leisure in just this sensible way.

Why don't you do a little whittling? Do you ever relax? How often do you give body and soul a complete rest? An hour of placid, leisurely whittling every day would add years to your expectation of life. I look in pity upon some of my friends who play golf two or three times a week, doing so upon the theory that it is good for them. But how do they do it?

These fine men rush through the day's work, on edge to get through in time to catch the four o'clock train. Under pressure of hurry they get short and cross, spoiling the tempers of their associates. All out of breath they catch the last car of the express. Hot and sticky and worn out they reach the club house. They get into golf togs like a fireman dons his uniform for a three-alarm fire. Rushing to the links they smash into the game as if launching a lifeboat to save a man from drowning.

After visiting the nineteenth hole and eating a tremendous dinner, it is counted a "great day." Well, it is a great day for the undertaker. Do you imagine that is good for health? It is not. Golf is a wonderful game and capable of adding to the joy and length of life, but not when played like this.

Unless you can play the game in a more leisurely and a more casual way, it will do you harm instead of good. Apply a little common sense to your recreations and they will mean more to you.

Invite your soul now and again by a period of absolute relaxation. Buy a good strong pocket knife and a stick of soft pine. With every long, curly shingle will come a revived and rejuvenated nerve cell. Good luck to you, Mr. Coolidge!

"That's where those planes went that were dapping around over us," said Eadie. "I'm glad they left us alone this afternoon. Planes are bad stuff."

"Well, shoot me a rocket," ordered the captain. Eadie consulted the code and then handed it to Jake.

"You might as well get some instruction," said the sergeant. "If I'm hit, you'll have to carry on. Hunt in the code for an S. O. S. signal and then shoot it. Here's the pistol."

Jake selected a rocket and putting it into the pistol, snapped the apparatus shut and, extending his arm, sent the signal sailing.

"They'll see it," said Eadie, "yellow smoke, at a height of seventy-five yards. There's a parachute holds it up and it stays up there about ten seconds. Look, captain, if there are any units too close to the bogch, they'd better pull back because the barrage might fall a little short."

"Small chance," replied the captain. "We're still the farthest advanced of the units of this division. The division's only got about a mile and a half of front. You'd think we could get on faster. Where's your barrage?"

"It takes a minute or two to figure the fire dope and lay the guns," said Eadie. "It'll take 'em some time to get started because they'll have to dope out what the rocket means."

Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed. The German fire, in view of the fact that the Americans were not advancing, began to slacken.

"Fire another rocket, Jake," directed Eadie.

"Which one?" asked Jake.

"Why, the same kind that you fired the last time, hammerhead!"

"I don't know what kind it was," muttered Jake.

"Why, you picked it out of the book and then off the pile all yourself."

"Naw," grinned Jake slyly. "I seen the one you was going to put in the pistol but laid down again when you give me the book, and I picked that one up and fired it."

"By G—d, you're learning to be an observer, anyway," said Eadie. "Listen, nit-wit. The rocket you want is a yellow smoke. Well, hunt around in your pockets and see if you've got a yellow smoke. It's marked on the bottom of the cartridge."

Jake hunted, but after he had taken out all his rockets and laid them in a neat row in front of him, as Eadie

had done with his, he could not find what he sought.

"There it is!" snorted Eadie, picking one up and showing the words to Jake "Fumee Jaune" on the base of the cartridge. "It's as plain as the nose on your face."

"Aw, what the h—l does 'fumee John' mean to me?" cried Jake. "I'm a white man. I don't savvy no frog lingo."

"Shoot the rocket!" said Eadie.

Away went the rocket and while it was still in air, shells began to burst in front. They did not form a hurricane of fire by any means, but they made a comfortable noise. Eadie, counting the bursts, decided that a battalion, three batteries, was firing.

"About ten minutes or so of this and we can advance again," said the captain cheerfully.

It is a heart warming thing to have a barrage arrive in answer to a rocket. So many times a whole dump full of rockets is fired and the barrage is nonexistent. And other times the barrage lands in astonishing places, anywhere but where it will do good. But this one was well placed, it was enthusiastic, and the infantry watched it with pleasure. Between the barrage and the one-pounders and machine guns the Germans would have to pull out, or be killed.

A half hour the barrage continued to play, then suddenly stopped. The infantry, without waiting for the order, sprang forward, struggled through some half destroyed wire and found themselves in the intermediate position. It was empty. Of the defenders of the trench there was no sign. There were neither wounded nor dead. And the fire of the German machine gunners, that had been so long quiet, once more began with redoubled fury.

"Well, let's keep going!" yelled the captain. "Don't stop here! They've pulled out, men, let's get after them!" The officers with the companies urged their men forward and the battalion climbed out of the rear wall of the system and went on.

The battalion staff followed the advance, hurried from one flank of the battalion to the other and directed the placing of the one-pounder when any place appeared that looked as though it might be occupied. The staff was not unwieldy, for it consisted only of Captain Lawrence, Sergeant Eadie, Jake, and a runner from Captain Lawrence's company.

The captain pulled men from holes and shoved them forward with his hands. He personally directed the surrounding and capture of a light machine gun that was all that was left of a strong point organized in some artificially deepened and connected shell holes. The captain had no tactical plan of advance. His only idea was to keep the men going forward. Their objective was still a long way off, but he had hopes of its achievement during the night.

At sunset the battalion had progressed to where they could look down a funnel-shaped valley in the woods on their left. This valley was strongly organized by the enemy, for the infantry now received a heavier fire than any they had yet experienced. Here Captain Lawrence was hit in the arm, but beyond putting on a bandage he paid it no attention. He was hit again five minutes later, on the same wrist.

"They've spotted the staff," said Eadie. "They can see us running around and waving our hands."

"Look at those sons of — in the hole over there!" cried the captain. "That's what disgusts me!" He pointed with his good arm to a half dozen gallant defenders of democracy who had huddled into a shell hole and, having allowed the advance to pass them, now began to timidly make their way out with every intention of breaking for the rear and safety.

"What Organization Do You Men Be long To?" Asked the Captain Sternly.

"I'll fix 'em," muttered the captain. "Here, sergeant, help me put a dressing on that wound, it hurts like h—l. They tell me it's only the slight wounds that hurt. How about it? You've been wounded."

"I wasn't wounded," said Eadie, winding a first-aid bandage around the captain's wrist. "I was gassed."

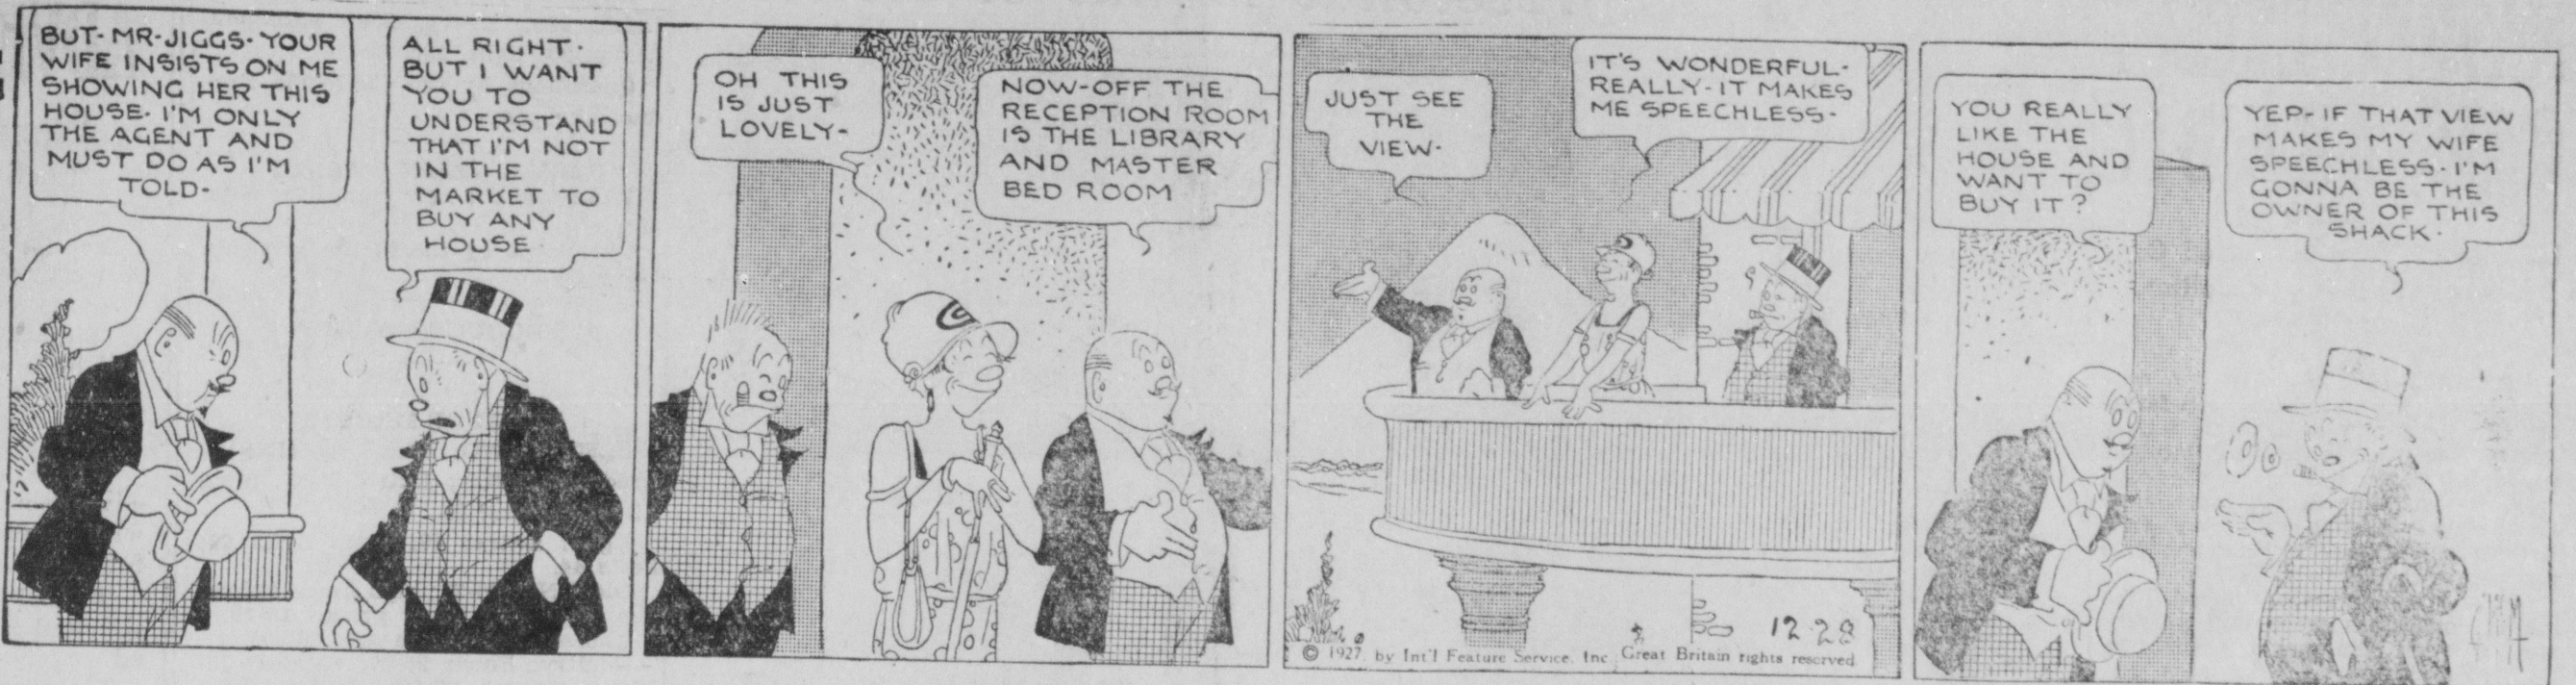

"Do they let you wear a round stripe for that?"

Eadie made no reply, but continued to wind the bandage. He made a knot, secured it, and tucked the ends under.

PHILADELPHIA EXPECTS TO BE SMOKELESS CITY

Tests Being Made by School of Medicine to Determine Amount of Sunshine.

By E. L. RAWLEY
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28—Tests to determine the amount of sunshine in Philadelphia are being conducted here under the auspices of the School of Medicine of Temple University and the National Conference Board of Sanitation. The experiments are expected to result in a realization of the dream of health enthusiasts—a smokeless city.
The researches are being made by Dr. Frank Hammond Krusen, Associate Dean of the Temple School of Medicine. An intricate electrical device, designed to keep an accurate record of the city's sunlight, has been installed upon the roof of the medical school building in the central part of the city while a similar instrument has been placed atop the Abington Memorial Hospital on the outskirts of the city.
At the Abington institution the machine is expected to prove conclusively that suburban dwellers derive the full healthful benefit of the actinic rays of the sunlight, because in the outlying sections the rays are not filtered by smoke clouds.
These devices, Dr. Krusen pointed out, undoubtedly will add valuable contributions to the scientific knowledge of the relationship between sunlight and health. When this data has been compiled, he said, it will be submitted to the city health authorities, and it is probable that out of the investigations will emerge an official committee of medical men and engineers who will make practical recommendations for the absolute elimination of the smoke nuisance. Dr. Krusen is also director of public health of Philadelphia.

"The invisible ultra-violet light from the sun, it has been conclusively demonstrated, kills germs," Dr. Krusen said, "abundance of light prevents eyestrain, promotes cleanliness, increases production, and prevents industrial accidents. The intra-red rays (or heat rays) are today effectively used in treating certain disorders of the body. Science is beginning to realize we are jeopardizing the healthy growth of all living things by living in smoke-filled communities. In this city we are not only cut off from much sunlight, but we are also deprived of the health-giving rays in the sunlight we have. The next step in the promotion of community health lies in a better understanding of the action of sunlight. The study which we are undertaking will help toward that end."

U. S. Cooperates
The two recorders are sufficiently close to each other to measure accurately the amount of daylight lost in the city, through the presence of smoke, dust, gas fumes and the like. The United States Public Health Service is cooperating in this work and Dr. James E. Ives, Government Illumination Expert and Physician to the United States Public Health Service, has recently completed the calibration of the recorders for a comparison of the records.

While no definite figures are available at this time estimates show that at least thirty per cent of sunlight is lost in the center of the city.

Dr. Krusen believes that a definite relation between lack of daylight and epidemics of disease will be established and that these machines will prove beyond the question of a doubt that the city dweller is losing much of the health-giving sunlight which is rightfully his.

Kiss No Light Matter With Early Christians

Among the early Christians the kiss of peace was a sacred ceremony, observed upon their most solemn occasions. It was called the seal of prayer, and was a symbol of that mutual forgiveness and reconciliation which the church required as an essential condition before anyone was admitted to the sacraments.

The Roman civilians at length took the kiss under their protection. Their code defined the nature, limits, incidents and such like of the "right of kissing."

The kiss had all the virtue of a bond, granted as a seal to the ceremony of betrothing; and if the husband-elect broke the engagement, repenting of what he had done, he surrendered a moiety of the presents received in the ceremony of betrothing, in consequence of the violence done to the modesty of the lady by a kiss.

In much later times the kiss was esteemed to be a ceremony of particular obligation. Julia, in "Two Gentlemen of Verona," after exchanging a ring with her lover, completes the contract by a kiss:
"And seal the bargain with a holy kiss."

The last instance in which the kiss formed the subject of serious regulation was when the Empress Catherine of Russia instituted assemblies of men and women to promote the cultivation of polite manners. Among the rules she directed that "no gentleman should force a kiss from or strike a woman in the assembly, under pain of exclusion."

WET NEW YEAR IS ANTICIPATED FOR NEW YORK

Excessive Merrymaking, Much Drunkenness Predicted by Broadway Experts.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.
NEW YORK, Dec. 28—New Year's Eve will be at wet—and no doubt as deadly—as any since the Volstead law was placed on the statute books.

Broadway predicts that the merrymaking will be excessive and unrestrained; so do the bootleggers, the cabaret proprietors and the speak-easies.

Indications are that the undertaking business will pick up on or about the first of the year.

Sixteen deaths from high-powered Christmas hootch have occurred in and around New York City, and the victims are dying one and two at a time. Hospitals are filled with scores of half dead drinkers. But this situation is not going to deter thousands of others from going on one grand spree next Saturday night.

Signs Infallible
Hotels report the infallible sign of the forthcoming "big night"—a tremendous eleventh hour rush for table reservations. The same condition prevails in the cabarets and road houses. All the twenty-nine ballrooms of the Hotel Astor have been reserved. The Hotel McAlpin plans to entertain 5,000 revelers. The Ambassador, the Sherry-Netherland, the Savoy-Plaza, the Roosevelt and other hostilities have arranged special programs. Supper prices range from $10 to $20 a plate.

Greenwich Village cabarets have jacked up their prices something fearful, and it will cost a small fortune to show a sizable party a good time at the nearby roadhouses.

Bootleggers are all set for a killing. They are assuring their public that they can supply all the booze that is needed to insure a carousal befitting the occasion.

Ginger Ale Scarce
Night clubs, in some instances, are finding it harder to get ginger ale than booze. Bootleggers have started to handle the better brands of ginger ale. This will be hard on the pocket-books of the clients. And, incidentally, a survey of the night club reservations shows that the out-of-town visitors will be in the majority at the Broadway celebration.

Prohibition agents, meanwhile, are devising ways and means to cope with the jollification. They are greatly outnumbered and, before the big night is over, may need the co-operation of the police.

Baby 1928 is bound to hear a mighty splash and many strange noises when he opens his eyes next Saturday midnight.

Courts Uphold Cow's Right to Costly Path

Chicago has a $2,000,000 monument to a cow in the form of a 22-story office building. A clause in the deed of the site of the new building necessitated a clever bit of cantilever construction in order to have the upper 21 stories 10 feet wider than the first floor.

It seems that years ago a Doctor Bassett owned the site and an adjoining site upon which he had his cow barn. The former became desirable for business, but the doctor would not sell it unless it was stipulated in the deed that a ten-foot strip along the west end of the lot be kept perpetually free for passage, so that his cow could travel back and forth to pasture freely. Despite the fact that several attempts have been made to nullify the clause, the courts upheld it. Thus Chicago's claim of being the only city respecting the humble cow with a $2,000,000 tribute.

GRAIN CROPS OF NATION, EXCEPT OATS, ARE BIG

Miracle of Weather Saved Corn Farmers Millions of Dollars, Survey Shows.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—(UP)—A miracle of weather saved the corn farmers of the country millions of dollars during the past year and brought prosperity to the west. All grain crops with the exception of oats were large and prices in all but corn moved in a narrow range, making for a stable market for the farmers.

While the farmers gained, the market operators were not entirely pleased with the performances in 1927. Features were lacking as prices in all but corn swung through a narrow arc. Government regulation played its part in reducing manipulation and this factor brought a reduction in volume of business.

Irregularity in corn was the one feature. Heavy selling of the cereal during the early months of the year caused a declining market which continued into April. May found the market oversold and an upturn started which did not end until August. Weather conditions, which prevented early planting and caused a gloomy outlook for the corn crop, reversed themselves in the fall and exceptionally hot weather brought out a bumper crop. Prices fell in proportion to the volume of the crop, but the farmers profited nevertheless.

Corn prices for the December delivery ranged from 80 3-4 cents a bushel to $1.20 1-4 with a drop from the high point nearly to the low of last spring. May 1928 corn ranged from 87 1-2c to $1.06 3-4. December wheat ranged between $1.21 1-8 to $1.50 3-4 while the May 1928 delivery since it has been on the board had only an 11 cent range, showing the narrow character of the trading.

Another season of big production in winter wheat is indicated by the seeding of a much larger acreage of winter wheat, private estimates of the increase running from 6 to nearly 10 per cent.

The end of the year finds the general situation in regard to the handling of cash grain satisfactory but with much to be desired in the speculative trade.

WENT TO HER GODS IN REGAL SPLENDOR

Luxurious Surroundings for Dead Viking Ruler.

A royal pleasure ship, last resting place of Queen Aasa, a ruler of the Vikings is one of the most remarkable finds ever made in old graves. At least this is the verdict of Sophie Gram, who in the journal of the Archaeological Society of Washington, Art and Archeology, describes the splendor with which this queen of about 800 A. D. was prepared for her "voyage" to meet the Norse gods.

It was a natural idea to the Vikings that their last journey would take them over the sea, Miss Gram explains. A king of queen was buried not only with the necessities for a long voyage, but with the luxuries which royalty, even among the hardy Norsemen, have always commanded. A ship, carriage and four sleighs, all beautifully carved, went into the queen's burial mound to assure her of fitting transportation wherever her death voyage might take her.

"The internment of Queen Aasa was attended by great splendor," she says. "Lavish offerings, the rumors of which spread far abroad, were made at the grave. In her honor fifteen horses, four dogs and one ox were sacrificed on board the vessel the queen was surrounded by a luxury which is astounding for those days. In the grave was placed her bed with down pillows and feather quilts. The walls of the burial chamber were covered with costly rugs from foreign countries, as well as with hangings, woven by the queen herself and her maidens, and dyed with vegetable colors.

"She had with her lamps, sewing equipment and all imaginable personal things, such as clothes and linen, kitchen utensils, chests with jewelry, also vegetables and grain. For entertainment there were chessboards, delectables with wine, walnuts and wild apples.

"Her closest bondwoman went with her to death. She had to give up her life in order that the queen should have company on the way to Valhalla. Perhaps she was killed according to the sacrificial ceremonies before being taken on board. But she may have gone into the grave to sit down beside her dead mistress, guarding her last sleep until her own life slowly ebbed out."

The finding of this ship and of the ship in which Queen Aasa's husband was buried strongly refutes the idea, so generally entertained, that the people from Viken were semibarbarous, Miss Gram points out.

The Oseberg ship, as Queen Aasa's craft is called, has been carefully restored and is now in the historical museum at Oslo.

Only Took 62 Years for Him to Get His Congressional Medal of Honor

After 62 years of waiting, Charles F. Hopkins, of Boonton, N. J., has finally received the Congressional Medal of Honor that he earned for conspicuous gallantry under fire during the Civil War.

However, don't blame the Government for the delay.

Mr. Hopkins could have had the medal, as well as the citation for distinguished bravery, 62 years ago. But he's a mighty modest man and was reluctant to apply personally for the honor.

NEW RECEIVERS OMIT ALL BATTERIES

Ordinary Lighting Circuits Bring Complete Socket Power to Receivers at a Cost Within Reach of All; Many Improvements in Dry Batteries.

New broadcast receivers which operate in connection with either alternating or direct current supplied by the house lighting mains, thereby dispensing with all batteries, and newly designed sets for dry battery and storage battery operation, were announced by E. E. Bucher, Assistant Vice-President of the Radio Corporation of America, in a statement to the public.

"The Radio Corporation of America long ago discerned a well-defined public demand and preference for radio receivers utilizing lighting current as the source of power to do away with all batteries and the need for their periodical replacement," said Mr. Bucher. "The new receivers therefore now bring complete socket power operated receivers within the reach of every purse and home, and for the millions of homes in communities not yet electrified there is provided the last word in dry battery and storage battery operated sets. They include numerous refinements as well as ingenious combinations in keeping with the growing importance of radio in the home; but the sound value of basic research and true engineering is borne out once more in the survival of certain definite fundamentals of radio reception which the Radio Corporation introduced several years ago and which remain unsurpassed," continued Mr. Bucher. "Perhaps the outstanding feature of the new models is in the perfected method of light socket operation which they embody, although tonal quality has been further improved. Beautiful cabinets with the radio components entirely self-contained yet made readily available by convenient doors, now place Radiolas on a par with the finest of home furnishings."

Superheterodyne Still Standard

The leaders continue to be represented by an 8-tube, loop-operated superheterodyne receiver—and a socket-power loudspeaker of surpassing tone and volume, together with complete rectifier supply for the A, B, and C requirements of the Radiola with which it is used in combination. Mr. Bucher's announcement continues: "Either in the form of separate units or incorporated in one cabinet, the best features of this combination have been retained in some of the models introduced. Certain refinements in design have permitted the inclusion of the powerful 104 Loudspeaker in one cabinet with the super-sensitive superheterodyne, with a complete absence of microphonic effects, but which in fact emphasizes its extraordinary tone quality.

"In another model, but likewise characterized by a distinctive cabinet and entirely self-contained equipment, is incorporated the well-known 8-tube superheterodyne receiver with the new 100-A loudspeaker, and operated by socket power.

"The superheterodyne circuit therefore continues as the standard of broadcast perfection after four years in the hands of the critical radio public. This circuit, quite as much as any

"Of revolutionary character is the introduction of a new model which is the culmination of years of research in set and tube design aimed to produce, for a moderate price, a receiver completely AC operated with a minimum of operating controls. Simplicity of operation and of maintenance are its main features. It has three stages of radio-frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio-frequency amplification. The new AC Radiotrons UX-226 are used in the radio-frequency stages and in the first audio-frequency stage. The new AC Radiotron UY-227 is used as a detector, and the last audio-frequency stage employs a UX-171 power amplifier Radiotron. The 'B' and 'C' voltages are obtained from a power supply unit built into the set, which employs the new high-power rectifier, Radiotron UX-280—full wave rectifier. There are only three controls on this set, one knob for tuning, one for volume control to regulate the output of the receiver and a power control switch to turn the power on and off.

"For those who prefer battery operation or whose homes are located in districts not as yet electrified, there is introduced a receiver that will be found to fill the most rigid requirements for sensitivity, selectivity and fine tone quality in its class. This is a new uni-control six-tube receiver employing the well-known and perfected tuned radio-frequency circuit with three stages of radio-frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio-frequency, taking five UX-201-A Radiotrons and one UX-112 power amplifier Radiotron. The internal construction of the set is extremely rugged, and with simplicity of operation are the two keynotes of this receiver.

To Continue Rural Sets

"In response to public demand, especially in rural districts, the Radio Corporation of America will continue their five-tube tuned radio-frequency receiver employing regeneration, and which provides unusual sensitivity and selectivity. It uses four UX-199 Radiotrons and a power amplifier Radiotron UX-120, in the last audio stage, giving excellent and undistorted musical reproduction.

"The loudspeaker 104, in addition to the present well-known AC model, is now to be presented in a DC model as well, thus making this superior radio device available in cities and hotels and institutions which are supplied with 110 volt direct current. An ingenious design provides this DC 104 with all the power and tone quality of the tried, tested and perfected AC model.

"As a loudspeaker particularly intended for operation with Radiolas and all other receivers operating on batteries and moderate socket-power, Loudspeaker 100-A is included among the new models. Its enclosed cone is of a design suggestive of a magic-piece clock, with a screen bezel; the whole finished in dull bronze."

Temper

"Moses," says a learned preacher, had one great fault and it kept him out of the promised land. He never learned to control his temper. And Moses is a good "bad example." The lack of self-control keeps otherwise good men and women forever out of the land of promise. Without self-control all other good qualities are built on the sand.

Aviation Movements

The Army Air corps says that airplanes can fly upside down for several miles, the exact number depending upon the make of the plane. Very few airplanes can fly in this position without losing altitude. The aviator is enabled to determine the position of his plane by means of a "turn and bank" indicator.

SEES COOPERATION AS MARKETING NEED

Department of Agriculture Expert Urges Use of Sound Business Methods.

Cooperative marketing is a business enterprise and must prove its value through the adoption and practice of sound business methods. J. W. Jones of the United States Department of Agriculture told cooperative leaders of Ohio who attended a series of cooperative institutes held during the past two weeks at Toledo, Cleveland, and Cincinnati. Cooperative marketing has often been sold on the basis of prejudice or promises rather than for exactly what it can and should accomplish, he maintained. Improved quality of product offered the consumer is one of the chief aims of the cooperative and cooperative handling brings a greater opportunity to accomplish this improvement than any other system of marketing, Mr. Jones believes.

The goal of cooperative marketing may be to reduce the costs of getting products to market. It may seek to reduce margins, to increase quality or to provide better marketing service. L. G. Foster of the rural economics department of Ohio State University told the same groups. It may be a combination of all of these goals, but whether one or all of them are sought, they must be kept in mind constantly. Some cooperatives have followed the call of expediency at the sacrifice of progress toward these goals, he said.

B. B. Mason of the auditing department of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation pointed out the importance of adequate auditing and accounting for cooperatives and the responsibility of the directors to direct commodity associations on the basis of such knowledge.

While cooperative marketing is a business enterprise, the human element of the organization must not be overlooked, and the development of organization consciousness through information is important, according to Depew Head of the Federation.

WELCOME ARRANGED

GUATEMALA CITY, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Preparations were made today to accord Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh an enthusiastic welcome when he arrives from Mexico City.

He is expected here late this afternoon. Through the minister of war, the public has been invited to witness Lindbergh's landing at La Aurora field.

The formal reception decoration by President General Lazorza Chacon, however, will be held tomorrow.

A ball will also be given for the American aviator by the American club and the Casino militar.

JAIL OUTBREAK AGAINST CHILD SLAYER FEARED

Life of Hickman Menaced by Prisoners—Hearing Awaits Attorney's Arrival.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Los Angeles officials are not to be misled by the apparent calm that settled over the city with the jailing of William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of little Marion Parker, it was announced today. The iron guard will be maintained with ceaseless vigilance.

Within two hours of Hickman's return here yesterday from Pendleton, Ore., where he was captured, he was hauled before Superior Judge Carlos Hardy to answer the murder and kidnapping indictments. The case was put over until tomorrow pending the arrival from Kansas City, of Attorney Jerome Walsh, who will represent the young slayer.

Meanwhile jail officials are uneasy over their responsibility of guarding the prisoner. They fear two things. One is an attempt at suicide by the prisoner. The other is attempts at violence on the part of other jail inmates.

Prisoners Hostile
Feeling against Hickman today was reported as running high among the prisoners. Threats against his life came to the ears of Jailer Dewar. It was reported that prisoners had been found fashioning clubs out of broomsticks they had purloined. All cells were searched for articles which might be used as weapons.

Hickman has declared he will stand by his confession and plead guilty, irrespective of what advice may be given him by his attorney. Officials here take small stock in such declarations, however. They say defense is advanced.

Frightened to Death
County Autopsy-Surgeon Wagner reported to Coroner Nance his opinion that strangulation was not the primary cause of the death of the Parker girl. Examination of the body gave no particular indications of this, he said.

He expressed his personal belief that fright had killed the child, that her heart had stopped when, upon Hickman placing the towel around her neck, she realized what was going to happen to her.

The Parker girl, Wagner said, was a very nervous child, and the agonies of her captivity had worn terribly upon her.

Hickman today was quoted as saying he was quite willing to repeat the details of the crime to Perry M. Parker, father of the victim.

RAMBO RELEASED

Case Dismissed When Witness Fails To Appear

Because Otto Halley, the man who was separated from $17 last Monday night, failed to appear when the case was called in the police court Tuesday evening, "Scram" George Rambo, whom he accused, was discharged from custody.

Rambo was also exonerated of the suspicion of entering the Gem restaurant, which was relieved of $108 Monday night.

This money, instead of being left in the cash register, had been secreted in the front portion of the restaurant, among some cigar boxes. Evidently when the proprietor, Mr. Myers hid the lucre, he was seen by someone, who made it his business to get it, when the proprietor left the place. "Scram" was suspected on account of his being the last customer in the restaurant that night.

HEAVY MAIL GOES THROUGH OFFICE

The postoffice, during the holiday rush of last week, sent out 15,000 holiday greeting cards daily for three days. The rush simmered down Friday and Saturday. The Christmas mail was much heavier than last year, but was distributed throughout the week, and did not discommode the mail clerks, who put in extra time taking care of the overplus of mail. All mail, both first and second class was expedited and gotten out on scheduled time.

MANY CATALOGUES SHIPPED BY FARM

The Triangular farm shipped this week 17,000 catalogues through the mail. Besides covering the Union, shipments were made to 18 foreign countries. Among the farthest countries were Siam, South Africa and New Zealand.

Agricultural Experts Will Speak At Sessions of Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Dr. William E. Dodd, of the University of Chicago, Chris Christensen of the division of cooperative marketing of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Secretary M. S. Windler and Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of the American Farm Bureau Federation are among the speakers at the annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, first announcement of the program of which has just been received at the office of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. The meeting, the ninth in the history of the organization, will be held in Columbus on Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 30 and 31.

As in past years, the meeting comes the first two days of Farmers' Week at Ohio State University. Unlike other years, however, sessions of the second day of the meeting will be attended by delegates and members of the organization at a down town hotel, with only the Monday sessions at the University.

"Shall American Farmers Become Peasants?" is the topic on which Doctor Dodd will speak. Mr. Christensen will speak on "Fundamentals of cooperation."

Reports of the year's work will be given at the opening of the meeting by President L. B. Palmer and Executive Secretary M. D. Lincoln. Legislative activities and needs of Ohio farmers will be discussed on Monday afternoon's program by O. C. Gray, Speaker of the House of Representatives and C. A. Dyer, legislative agent of state farm bureau and grange.

Adoption of policies and program for the coming year will be the chief concern of the delegates at the Tuesday sessions of the meeting. At this time resolutions offered by various county farm bureaus will be discussed by all delegates.

Every county in Ohio is expected to have representatives at the meeting.

REMUS WITNESS TO FIGHT CHARGE

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 28.—(UP)—John S. Berger, Los Angeles fair promoter indicted for perjury in connection with the George Remus murder trial, today prepared to appeal the decision of Criminal Judge Chester R. Shook who found him guilty of contempt of court. Berge is at liberty under $1,000.

Berger was fined $250 and sentenced to ten days in jail for circulating a petition seeking to have the indictment against him quashed. The petition was signed by the jurors who acquitted Remus. They with Berger, were reprimanded by Judge Shook yesterday.

FARM LEADERS WILL ATTEND SCHOOL HERE

Training Institute Will Be Conducted in Circleville For Township Workers.

More than 100 Farm Bureau workers and leaders from the different townships throughout the county are coming into the Farm Bureau Training School which will be held at the Farm Bureau office in Circleville on Thursday, Jan. 5th.

A systematic membership campaign, staged by the County Farm Bureau to increase its membership, is making unusual progress under the direction of R. E. May, H. O. Peters and H. S. Lewis.

R. E. May, membership maintenance director of the County Farm Bureau, said: "In pledging our team workers, it is our aim to develop in each township an organization 'set up' through which the Farm Bureau story may be effectively told. The county team school is a step in the preparation of our Township Farm Bureau workers prior to solicitation."

Stand Is Asked
"In soliciting membership," Mr. May said, "We expect to ask our prospects to take a definite stand upon the following:

"1. Do you believe something should be done to improve present conditions?"

"2. Don't you believe that the burden of work to bring this about should be borne by every worthwhile farmer rather than a few?"

"3. Are you willing to join with other Ohio Farmers and work through the Farm Bureau to bring about this improvement?"

List of Speakers
M. D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau; F. G. Ketter, livestock marketing director of the State Farm Bureau and J. R. Allger, field secretary of the state organization will appear on the Training School program and assist the County Farm Bureau leaders in equipping the workers with information concerning the opportunities offered through the Farm Bureau.

Pickaway County Farm Bureau holds an enviable record in organized accomplishments throughout the state. An increased membership is essential to maintain this position.

ENGLISH BLIZZARD LEAVES SUFFERING

Villages Isolated by Snow—Thames Valley Flooded—Shipping Disorganized

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Conditions of suffering and distress throughout many sections of England resulting from the great blizzard which struck the British Isles over the weekend were still acute today.

Dozens of villages were still isolated by the snow and have not received food supplies since last Saturday.

The Thames river has risen eight feet in some sections and thousands of acres are under water. Authorities fear the worst flood in years when the snow and ice begin to thaw.

In Canterbury, 300 families were homeless after the Stour river flooded its banks.

All Paris to London telephones were down and phone service throughout England generally was badly disorganized.

Pierce gales, continuing to whip the channel, still disorganized shipping, especially the cross-channel services.

GETS $150 FINE ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Orley Schwalbaugh, arrested last week by the sheriff's department, and charged with having liquor in his possession was found guilty in probate court and was given a fine of $150 and costs by Judge Adkins.

Schwalbaugh was represented by Luther O. Day of Chillicothe, who has given notice to arrest judgment, as the case will be appealed to the court of appeals. In the meantime Mr. Schwalbaugh is in the county jail.

BULLET IS FIRED AT OHIO MAYOR'S WIFE

SHANESVILLE, O., Dec. 28.—(UP)—An unidentified marksman fired a bullet through the windshield of Mrs. R. E. Fair's automobile here last night, barely missing the woman. Mrs. Fair is the wife of the Shanesville mayor. She was enroute to Walnut creek at the time.

Newfoundland Operator Tells of Hearing "The Dawn's" Radio Signals.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Dec. 28 (UP)—A message from the Western Union at Hearts Content, Newfoundland, last night told of picking up a radio signal asking for location. The call letters were indistinct although they resembled those of the missing airplane "Dawn."

The message received from the Western Union read:

"One of our operators, Hillyard, reports that yesterday afternoon he picked up on his radio the following signals, W, next either P or six, then the letter U. Following that were the words, 'Where are we? Can you locate us?' That was repeated three or four times for half an hour and came in very loudly, indicating to the receiver that the sending station was within a short range. The operator made no mention of it until learning that The Dawn's call letters were WMU."

NAVAL AIR STATION. Lakehurst, N. J., Dec. 28 (INS)—The Navy dirigible Los Angeles was placed in its hangar here at 1:15 o'clock this morning, after an unsuccessful search off the coast of New England for "The Dawn," the missing Grayson plane.

The dirigible appeared over the field at 11:35 p. m. and landed at 12:30 a. m. The airship patrolled the "ocean graveyard" from Cape Cod to Emerald Banks, about 170 miles southwest of Halifax, and then started back again.

According to Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, who was in charge of the ship, the Los Angeles covered about 1,200 square miles in its search. Two United States destroyers, the Mahan and the Sturdivant, assisted the search from below, sailing fifteen miles apart.

SANITY HEARING OF REMUS STARTS

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 28.—Certain in his own mind that he was just one step from absolute freedom, George Remus appeared today before Judge William H. Leuders in probate court for an insanity examination.

When Remus was acquitted last week of murder in the killing of his wife, Imogene, Oct. 6, the verdict acted as a lunacy affidavit against Remus since Remus was acquitted on the sole ground of insanity.

HOME QUARTINED

The home of Kirby Russel in Pickaway township, near the Ross county line, has been quarantined, on account of scarlet fever in the family.

Mrs. "Lindy" Also Leaves Mexico City in Plane on Return Journey to Detroit.

BULLETIN

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28.—Col. Charles Lindbergh arrived at Guatemala City at 2:45 o'clock (Circleville time) according to word received here from the Guatemala capital. Word also was received of the safe arrival in Brownsville, Tex., of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the aviator, on her return flight to Detroit.

VALBUENA, FLYING FIELD, Mexico City, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Setting forth on another mission of good will, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off in the Spirit of St. Louis at 6:35 a. m. today.

After a few hours of flight across the mountains and jungles of southeastern Mexico he hoped to arrive at Guatemala City, the first of several central American capitals on the air ambassador's calling list.

Lindbergh arrived at the field at 5:35 a. m., before the chill December dawn had come to light his way. He was accompanied by Dwight Morrow, United States ambassador.

Loses Little Time
The flier lost little time it getting to his plane. He began to putter around it and shortly after 6 a. m. the mechanical part of the "WE" combination was rolled from its hanger.

Five hundred persons were at the field and the crowd increased with the approach of daybreak. Six floodlights were trained on the field.

The flight to Guatemala meant another farewell for the aviator and his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, who came here from Detroit to spend Christmas with her son.

Mother at Field
Mrs. Lindbergh and Mrs. Morrow were together on the field and the former planned to leave on the return flight to Detroit as soon as Lindbergh should disappear over the mountains.

Lindbergh circled the field once and then roared off, soon disappearing. Seven other planes arose to join him and all ten craft were out of sight in two minutes. The escort planes intended to go only a few miles, leaving Lindbergh to travel his solitary way most of the 675 miles to Guatemala City.

Lindbergh hoped to arrive in the early afternoon.

Weather conditions were in his favor. There was a slight haze at the foothills but clear, blue skies could be seen above the distant mountains.

FACES DANGER
But even with perfect weather the flight afforded danger. Conditions over the terrain to the southeast are little known and Lindbergh will have had few predecessors on the aerial trial to Guatemala.

He will pass no large cities, if he remains to the route he outlined at the American embassy here and much of the time he will be over jungle country where a safe landing would be almost impossible.

However he seemed to consider the flight no more perilous than several overland trips he has made, notably the one over the Rockies at night between San Diego and St. Louis while on his way to New York for the trans-ocean flight to Paris last spring.

There was no formality in the take-off today. Lindbergh bade good-bye to his mother and friends he met at the embassy. He shook hands with General Alvarez, who represented President Calles, and then climbed into his plane.

He waved his hand to the crowd as he taxied down the field for a long start and then arose quickly.

MOTHER LEAVES
After bidding her son good-bye on his flight to Guatemala City, Mrs. Lindbergh today started back to the United States in the Ford-Stout airplane that brought her here for a Christmas reunion with Col. Lindbergh.

The plane bearing Mrs. Lindbergh and her party left the ground at 8:54 a. m. (Mexican time), a few minutes after her son had hopped off toward Central America.

Two escort planes started north with the Ford craft.

Mrs. Lindbergh intended to make the trip back to Detroit by more or less easy stages, with Tampico the first stop. She hoped to reach her home Friday night.

FRENCH SCARCE ALONG RIVIERA; WINTER DIFFERS

Natives Away From Hotels
and Casinos.

By ALICE LANGEIER
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NICE, FRANCE, Dec. 28—What's the hardest thing to find on the Riviera? It's a Frenchman, according to a certain motion picture producer now directing a film which shows why wine is much cheaper than water in sunny France.

He needed French and American types. The latter were very easy to find. All he had to do was sit for half an hour in front of any one of the numerous Riviera cafes. He found any number of perfect national American types.

Then he began to comb Nice for the perfect Frenchman. After two days he found one who had the characteristic little goatee and moustache but he was a hunchback and had to be photographed from a special angle to hide his defect. The movie producer managed to use him, however. He was obliged to or else not produce his film.

Wealthy winter visitors and the subsequent high prices have driven the real Frenchmen into the hills, away from the palace hotels, and Casinos. Then too, those who do remain behind in constant contact with tourists of the Riviera, lose their identity and adapt the manners, clothing and language of the predominant foreign type—that is, the Anglo-Saxon.

The story runs that one native who remained behind became so nervous hearing nothing spoken but English, German, Dutch, Russian and Danish that he staggered up to a French gendarme and begged: "For God's sake talk, I want to hear some French!"

The man who invented the story about Isadora Duncan's fatal shawl being bought by a rich American girl who wore it as a charm and won large sums of money at the Casino on the Riviera, has now gone to jail as the result of another unpleasant joke. He dined and wine well one evening in Nice and then told the proprietor that he had no French money, but would pay him with a big German note. It happened to be a five thousand mark bill, but a bit out of date. The proprietor then thought it was his turn to play a joke and called in the police.

This is turning out to be one of the most unusual winters the Riviera has ever seen. Although the days

In an appeal for continued support of the Near East Relief's educational work overseas, the refugee children of its orphanage at Corinth, Greece, spell out a reference to Paul's Epistle to the inhabitants of this same Greek city. The verse quoted says: "We would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble, which came to us in Asia, inasmuch that we despaired even of life. . . But God delivered us from so great a death, ye also helping, and for the gift bestowed upon us by many persons thanks should be given on our behalf." The photograph is being used in thousands of schools and churches in connection with observance of Golden Rule Sunday for the Near East Relief work.

BRITISH FILMS TO MAKE FIGHT ON HOLLYWOOD

Reciprocal Agreement in Movie Business.

By J. C. OESTRECHER

LONDON, Dec. 28—(INS)—Another step in the campaign of British film producers for worldwide distribution of their pictures in competition with Hollywood, has been taken with the signing of an important reciprocal agreement between two British and German film interests.

The contracting parties are the Gaumont-British Picture Corporation the largest firm of its kind in England, and the UFA, the famous German and distributing organization.

According to the terms of the agreement, which takes effect next April, the Gaumont-British company will distribute German films in the United Kingdom, while the UFA will market English films in Germany and Central Europe.

Important Agreement
Cinema circles here look upon the agreement as of the utmost importance, insofar as it will provide Great Britain with its first opportunity for the distribution of its films in Germany. With this as a nucleus, the British producers hope to extend their scope throughout the world, with the hope of giving the American producers the first real competition of their lives.

This is the first time that a British company has been able to negotiate an "output" contract on such lines for the exploitation of its product in a Continental market. It is deemed especially important at the present time because of the new German "Kontingent" legislation, which will so restrict importations that even the largest American companies will be able to import only a very small number of films, unless "kontingent" is found for them by German film companies.

To Exchange Artists
The UFA company, according to the agreement, will supply the "Kontingent" necessary to admit the Gaumont-British films. The agreement furthermore allows the British company to have a voice in the activities of the German company, and to be present on the studies during productions.

It is planned also from time to time to exchange artists, so that British players may learn the German technique and vice versa.

It is pointed out that the agreement is a trading treaty only, and involves no financial merger or joint capital interest between the two concerns.

VILLAGE CLAIMS YOUNGEST MAYOR

NORTH KINGSVILLE, O., Dec. 28—(INS)—This village boasts the youngest mayor in Ohio. He is Harold Fowler, 26, and available records indicate that such an office never has been in the state by a man so young.

Running as an independent, after friends had started a boom for him, Fowler was elected over the former incumbent.

The "boy mayor" is married and has a son.

GIRL WILL RECOVER

MARYSVILLE, O., Dec. 28—(INS)—Nora Virginia Leach, 14, who fired a bullet into her breast with suicidal intent, rather than go to school, three weeks ago, has been removed to her home from the hospital here. Physicians say she will recover though the bullet pierced her right lung.

ANNOUNCE BIRTHS

LONDON, Dec. 28—Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Kehoe announce the birth of a son. A daughter, to Mr. and Mrs. Ward Cross. Daughter, to Mr. and Mrs. James Morris. Lilly Chapel. Daughter, to Mr. and Mrs. Ora Bell.

MINERS FEAR DISTILLERS

NEW LEXINGTON, — Dec. 28—Several coal operators at Shawnee and New Straitsville have appealed to the local and state prohibition officials to make further efforts to clean up the illicit traffic in southern Perry county in idle mines. The owners fear fire.

Clemenceau Sad Over Death of Loved Brother

PARIS, Dec. 28—(INS)—"The Tiger" is not smiling these days. Monsieur Clemenceau is very sad over the recent death of his brother, Albert, whom he loved more than any other person now living.

The difference of twenty years in their ages was enough to make the ex-president really play the part of the elder brother. All through his life he had watched over and protected "Little Albert." He felt certain, however, that he would be the one to leave this old world first so he made his brother the executor of his will and counted upon his to arrange all matters after his death.

This is the second bereavement for Clemenceau within a few weeks his sister having died only recently.

DARBYVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Grabill and family were entertained to a Christmas dinner at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Lehman, of Columbus. This is Mrs. Grabill's first Christmas in forty-two years to be spent away from Darbyville.

Mrs. Milton Carpenter and children, Harry and Mary Frances, spent Christmas with relatives in Fostoria. Mr. Alva Hott and Miss Anna Sample, of Ashland, were Sunday guests of his brother, Mr. Harry Hott and family.

Mr. G. W. Miller had Christmas dinner with his son, Dr. Miller, of Columbus, and was accompanied home by Mrs. Miller, who spent the previous week there.

Mrs. George Alexander and daughter, Florence, of near Lancaster, returned home after spending Christmas with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Hott.

Miss Sadie Hoover is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Clarence Curtin, of Circleville.

Mrs. Mary T. Miller entertained her children to Christmas dinner.

Mr. Leon Shelton is visiting his relatives in Gallipolis.

Mrs. E. J. Mullock spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Charles Alkire, of Cook Station.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hill entertained the Porter-Hill families to the annual Christmas dinner. This was also their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Mary Miller, Wednesday, Jan. 11. Mrs. Pearl Smith will assist. The Muhlenberg teams again defeated the Scioto teams. Score: Girls, 9-3. Boys, 44-20.

The Alumni teams will play the Muhlenberg teams, both boys and girls, Friday evening, Dec. 30. Derby boys will also play our second team of boys.

The pageant, "The Sign of God," given by the members of the M. E. church, Sunday night, was very well presented to a large and attentive crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hott, of Ashville, were Sunday guests of her father and sister, Mr. Henry Hill and daughter, Elizabeth.

Dolores Huffer, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delano Huffer, is recovering from a severe case of intestinal grip.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Downs and family spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Scott Redman and family, of near Derby.

NEW EQUIPMENT FOR KANSAS CITY HOTELS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 27—(UP)—New silverware, linens and equipment in general will greet delegates to the Republican national convention in Kansas City next June at the various hotels and cafes.

William M. Symon, convention bureau manager of the chamber of commerce, has announced that virtually all Kansas City establishments that expect to entertain part of the host of delegates have placed orders already for new equipment so they may suitably handle the increased business.

SPANISH-AMERICAN VETERANS TO MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 28—(UP)—National officers of the Spanish-American War Veterans will be guests in Miami, Jan. 20, prior to a visit to Cuba with the Cuban ambassador to the United States. While here the officers will be entertained by the John J. Pershing Camp, of Miami. The mission of the officers will be to make arrangements for the national convention of Spanish-American War Veterans which will be held in Havana in October, 1928.

FAIL TO SAVE BLACK PRINCE'S CARGO OF GOLD

Efforts to Salvage $15,000,000 in Precious Metal Again
Defeated.

BALAKAVA, Crimea, Dec. 28—(INS)—Efforts to salvage $15,000,000 in gold from the British Cruiser "Black Prince," which sank off Balaklava during the Crimean war, have failed again. The turbulent Black Sea still clings to its mysterious treasure horde which has tantalized gold seekers for more than a half century.

Five pieces of gold represent all the luck that Japanese divers have had in four months of laborious effort before they abandoned the job as hopeless.

They scooped away 2,000 tons of sand and rocks so as to effect an entrance to the vessel. They spent nearly $100,000 and all they got was the five unique souvenirs.

Four of the gold coins are British and bear the inscriptions of George IV and the dates 1821 and 1823. The fifth is a Turkish piece, valued at about $100. The issue value of all the coins was one pound. The fact that the pieces were found at the bottom of sand which covered the decks of the sunken boat leads to the belief that the chests in which the gold was carried to pay the British forces fighting in the Crimea, were cracked open by the waves and the money washed over the bottom of the sea.

Soviet experts, however, are confident that the gold is still below the decks of the cruiser. They expect to organize another diving expedition.

The Japanese undertaking which failed was begun under the concession plan last July. The agreement contemplated a 50-50 split between the Japanese salvaging firm and the soviet government of all the booty up to 1,000,000 rubles. Beyond that the Soviet government was to get 60 per cent.

ROBTOWN

The date of our next Aid meeting has been changed from Thursday, Jan. 12, until Saturday night, Jan. 14, so as not to interfere in any way with our revival services, which will begin Sunday night, Jan. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Rob Hott and family spent Christmas Day with Mrs. Hott's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde White in Circleville.

Miss Viola Wolford was a Christmas visitor of relatives in Chillicothe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Neff, of near Mt. Sterling, were Christmas guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Row and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ned Bell had for Christmas company, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Bercher and family, of Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Bertha Clark entertained to a family Christmas dinner, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Florence entertained to a family dinner on Christmas Day.

Our Christmas program was somewhat handicapped on account of Miss Marjorie Johnson being ill. Miss Johnson was one of the main committee, but nevertheless, it was carried out as well as was possible under the circumstances.

There were a few from our community who attended the Christmas program at Darbyville, Sunday night, and all say, "It was just splendid." It seems impossible for any program to have been any better.

SEDAN, France, Dec. 28—(UP)—Here is the secret of long life, according to Madame Hoty, whose passing the century mark was the occasion of an official celebration here: "Don't worry. Do nothing but live. Don't indulge in foolish ambitions. Be content with what you've got."

Mme. Hoty was born in Sedan, Nov. 30, 1827. Her husband, who was born in 1821, died at the age of 78. She was an eye-witness of the revolution of 1848, the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71 and the Great war, many of the battles of which were fought around here. Mme. Hoty reads several newspapers every day without glasses and talks entertainingly on a host of subjects. She has an excellent appetite.

BRITISH APPEAL FOR GOOD MEN AT AMSTERDAM

Lord Rochdale, Former Noted Athlete, Wants Strong Teams at Games.

By F. A. WRAY
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Dec. 28.—Lord Rochdale, chairman of the British Olympic Association, and former noted athlete, is making a strong appeal for funds to ensure strong British representation at the 1928 Games at Amsterdam.
"Great Britain," says Lord Rochdale, "is at this great disadvantage that, having won the war, and having paid the debts resulting from it, she is the only nation which cannot afford State contribution towards any national or international sport."
"Fortunately, France, Italy, Germany, and the other smaller countries have been able to make large payments which have almost relieved the responsible authorities from any contribution at all."
"It becomes imperative, therefore, that the British public should personally help if they wish Great Britain to maintain her proper status in the Olympic Games."
For Financial Aid
Lord Rochdale adduces the main arguments in his plea for financial support for British participation.
"Amid all the inherent disasters of the war," he says, "we may perhaps count as an asset for good the fusion of international feeling and a scene of the value of sport and games.

"Not only has it come as a physical regeneration, but as a civilizing and progressive factor. It would be most valuable if there were an accurate account of all the nations progress in sport since the great war."

"Take two examples only: Germany's organization and minute thoroughness, formerly directed to military expenditure and preparation, now flow in ever-growing volume into the channels of sport. Elaborate playgrounds have sprung into being all over the country by the direct exertions and expenditures of the Government."

"The German representatives on the International Olympic Committee, Herr Lewaldt, a member of the German Cabinet, told me that two hundred representatives from all over the country were being taken for a tour throughout Germany, with sleeping carriages and every convenience, to be made acquainted with these preparations for physical development and sport."

"Mussolini, in Italy, has been not less active in his program for athletics and tennis for every Italian. A large stadium has been erected at enormous expense at Bologna, to be followed in due course by others in various parts of Italy."

African Olympics
"In Africa so far this spirit spread that there are to be African Olympic Games in 1929 among every State, colony, mandated territory and dominion and $150,000 has already been collected of which King Fuad has contributed $15,000 and a magnificent Stadium has been made at Alexandria."

"Amid this revival, then, and missionary effort for sport all over the world, the British Olympic Association has been called on to make its decision whether or not it should take part in the ninth Olympiad at Amsterdam in 1928."

"The British Olympic Association

decided to compete. It is now necessary for the British public to provide the funds."

Paris Style Hints

By ALICE LANGELEIR
PARIS, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Madame will probably "muff" it again this winter, according to the smart dressmakers and furriers who are bringing out fashionable combinations of fur and cloth to keep the hands warm and cozy.

They are not the simple, unadorned muffs of old, but a perky frivolous version which comes as an adjunct to any chic costume and helps to set the whole thing off. One model to accompany a tulle dress of smooth black wool comes in half moon shape and it made of the fabric and astrakhan fur which makes the high turnover collar. It has a smart moire bow at the top and still another has a flower placed in the center of the bow.

Any fur is used to make the muff, but preferably the closely-shaved ones which are so popular this winter.

And along with the minuscule muff has come the latest idea of a masculine necktie. Replicas of this, very much elongated and made in the finest silk, promises to be extremely fashionable to wear with coats trimmed with shawl collars.

For afternoon wear one of the dressmakers is creating these tiescarves in a lame mixed with wool, while for morning, or to go with heavy tweed coats, they are made in smart checks or designs, which remain one of little boys' school ties.

Time is priceless, but most of mankind prefer some sort of remuneration for it.—Bellefontaine, O., Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(INS)—

The Federal Reserve Board will be given the task of making the average man's dollar buy as much a year from now as it will today, if Congress enacts a law to be proposed by Rep. James G. Strong, (R.) of Kansas, a member of the house committee on banking and currency.

"I shall seek enactment of my bill which directs the officers of the Federal Reserve System to use all of their vast powers for the stabilization of the purchasing power of the dollar," said Rep. Strong.

"If the Federal Reserve System had done this in 1919 inflation would have been checked and the consequent disaster of deflation which wrecked business, forced thousands of banks to close and a million farmers to lose their farms would have been avoided.

"To insure against a repetition of such a calamity I hope that Congress will direct a policy of stabilization of the price level shall be one of the primary duties of the reserve system."

Strong declared that the Federal Reserve Board already possesses adequate powers to take these steps and that it has exercised a stabilizing influence on the price level in the last three or four years. He proposes, however, that Congress shall make it mandatory upon the board to pursue the policy.

Brown-Mann Wedding

The Rev. Thomas Taylor Crawford of the First M. E. church of Columbus, officiated at the church wedding of Miss Betty Mann of Circleville, and Mr. John Terry Brown of Circleville, Tuesday evening, Dec. 27. Following the church service, a reception was held at the Columbus Woman's club on East Town street.

Miss Sarah Jeanette Brown, of Circleville, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were all sorority sisters of the bride. They were Miss Betty Walker, Miss Martha Hale and Miss Goenna Schlitt, who wore dresses of white chiffon velvet, made sleeveless and with low necks, and with crushed satin bows at the waist-line. These bows and the bolero jackets were lined with cerise satin. Their shoes were also cerise and they carried white elbow muffs trimmed with red rosebuds.

Mrs. Harland Jones, the matron-of-honor, and Miss Brown, the maid of honor, who entered the church together wore gowns of cerise velvet, nude hose and cerise satin pumps and carried arm bouquets of white roses.

The bride's mother wore blue velvet, while Mrs. Cary Brown, of Circleville, the bridegroom's mother, was in gold lace over jade, and both had shoulder corsages of pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

For the occasion, the altar of the church was banked with Christmas trees, holly and cedar, while poinsettias in tall ivory colored baskets added color to the scene which was lighted with three seven-branched candelabra.

The bride's gown was made of ivory satin in period style with a lace trimmed skirt. The dainty lace veil which fell into a five yard train was held in place by a band of pearls and orange blossoms.

The groom graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1925 and is a member of Tau Beta Pi and Sigma Xi fraternities. He is at present production manager of the Milwaukee Chain and Belt Co. The bride was graduated in June from Ohio State university and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta.

At Dearth Home

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dearth of East Main street, entertained with a family dinner Sunday at noon. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dearth, of Hamilton; Mrs. Margaret Dearth, of Chillicothe, and Mrs. Mary Johnston and Miss Alyce E. McRoberts of Kingston.

Family Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hott entertained to a family dinner Christmas Day, the following guests: Mrs. Geo. Alexander and daughter, Miss Florence, of Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hott, of Harrisburg; Miss Anna Sample and Alvah Hott, of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hott and children, Paul and Mary Frances; Mrs. F. C. Rizer and children, Filmore, Jr., and Bobby, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Clark, of Columbus; Miss Jennie Hott and Doris, Bernice and Harry, Jr. After dinner the Christmas tree was unburdened of its load of presents and each guest received his share, and all agreed to be the guests next year at the same place.

Visit Parents Here

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Root had for their Christmas guests, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar and daughter, Mary Ellen, of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Nichols and daughters, Esther and Gildy, and sons, Robert and Richard, of Obetz Junction; Mr. Ellsworth Root from the western states, and daughter Myrtle; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Root, of Circleville, and Mr. and Mrs. William Sells, of Williamsport. The affair was appreciated by Mrs. Root because of the fact that all her children were present. She was presented with a radio by her oldest son, and received many other presents. The evening was spent in novel games and music.

To Take Cruise

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Albro Blodgett, of Toledo, will leave the second week in January for a Mediterranean cruise. Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who have been visiting here will be gone about six weeks, while Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett will remain for a longer time.

Visits Brother

M. B. Trout, county treasurer, spent Christmas with his brother, A. H. Trout and family, in Marion. A. H. Trout is in a very serious condition as the result of three strokes of paralysis, which he has suffered.

W. C. T. U. To Meet

There will be a meeting of the Circleville W. C. T. U., Friday evening at 7 o'clock, at the Methodist Church. Miss Charlotte Phelps will be the leader. This organization will hold a market in the second week of January.

Go To Columbus

Mrs. Flora Gorton and grandsons, Charles and Robert Davis, left Wednesday afternoon to spend the remainder of the holidays in Columbus, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Markle, Mrs. Cora Ferguson and Mrs. Etta Stewart.

Here From Alaska

When Mr. and Mrs. John S. Neff, of East Union Street, entertained their children with a family dinner on Christmas Day, they were most delightfully surprised by the arrival of their youngest daughter, Mrs. W. B. Poor, from Fairbanks, Alaska. No one knew of her plans and her coming added a great deal of pleasure to the affair. She will remain for an extended visit until Mr. Poor will change his location.

Guests at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Van Geis-ten, of New York City, were dinner guests Tuesday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilder of East Mound street.

Surprised on Birthday

Relatives of Mr. John Carle of West Main street, honored him on his birthday Tuesday, with a surprise party at 8 o'clock. His guests were: Mrs. John English, Miss Anne English, Mrs. Margaret Stocklen, Miss Katherine English and Miss Genevieve English of this city; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sunderman of Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan and daughter, Rita Jean, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. George Snider and daughters; Helen, Frances, Evelyn, Lucille and Bertha and sons, Edward and Walter of Columbus. One of the features of the successful evening was the presentation of a basket of gifts to Mr. Carle by Rita Jean Ryan, his charming little niece.

At Mowery Home

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Mowery, of Laurelville, had as their guests for several days, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Robinson and Mrs. T. S. Wheeler, of Rochester, N. Y., who are motoring from their home to St. Petersburg, Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Mowery's daughter, Miss Etta Mowery, will accompany them and spend the winter in the south. The party expect to visit Mammoth Cave in Kentucky, Chattanooga, Tenn., Stone Mountain, Georgia and other interesting points en-route.

Is Luncheon Guest

Miss Elizabeth Dunlap was the luncheon guest in Columbus Tuesday of Mrs. William Scobee of the Charnel. Thursday Miss Dunlap will go to Columbus to be the guest of Miss Frances Redding.

TARLTON

Tarleton can boast of one of the finest Community Christmas trees in the whole country. It is a natural growing pine tree, planted in the park by John Zehrung, forty years ago, and has grown into the height of nearly 50 feet and a beautiful shaped tree.

The citizens of Tarleton and vicinity have donated for the purpose of decorating the tree. It is electrically lighted with about 75 bulbs of various colors and all kinds of decorations, with a large white star in the extreme top, with a bulb directly under it, which presents a beautiful sight to behold. On last Saturday night, Santa Claus made his appearance and gave every child in town a pop corn ball and Esquimo pies, which were given by A. M. Shaeffer. Prof. John Macklin made an appropriate address, telling why and how the tree happened to be planted by his grandfather Zehrung, so many years ago. Christmas carols were sung and a program was carried out to the letter, appropriate for the occasion. The tree will be lighted every night this week, including New Year's night. Mr. E. S. Ballard, the promoter, wishes to thank all who donated toward the making up of the fund for the decorating, and invites all in to view the tree.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark T. Dresbach and sons, Byron and Robert, of Dalesville, Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. George D. Mowery and Etta, of Laurelville; Mr. and Mrs. John Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. Noah Waliser, Mr. and Mrs. Arlow Waliser and son, Donald, ate Christmas turkey at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Mowery, and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Luckhart, of this valley.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Strous entertained to a nice goose dinner and all the trimmings, at their home on Christmas Day, quite a number of their friends.

Mrs. Lillie Zehrung is spending the week with relatives in and around Ringgold, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Mowery entertained to a six o'clock dinner, last

FIND OLD CHURCH RESEMBLING TEMPLE

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—An ancient Roman Temple, has been discovered by Lord Dynevor at his Carmarthenshire seat, Dynevor Park.

The removal of a thick growth of ivy from the south wall of the family church revealed a pointed arched doorway. This led into an apartment built like a cell. The topmost of a flight of five stone steps in the apartment reaches the floor of the present church.

SLAYER OF COUPLE IS BEING SOUGHT

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Dec. 28.—(INS)—A general search for Wise Bailey, wanted in connection with the murder of his mother and her husband at Pierpont, early yesterday was in progress in southern West Virginia today.

Enoch Toliver, 87, was found dead in bed and his wife, Rhoda, 65, was found on the floor of the kitchen. A coroner's inquest revealed that the aged man was slain by blows on the head with the butt of a shotgun, while his wife's skull was crushed with a smoothing iron.

AIRPLANES SEARCH FOR DUCK HUNTERS

GLENCOE, Ill., Dec. 28.—(INS)—Two airplanes, a fleet of coast guard boats, police and 100 Boy Scouts were searching the ice-jammed coast of Lake Michigan today for two duck hunters who have been missing since early Monday morning.

They are Alexander Naitland, 25, and Robert Case, 14, both members of wealthy north shore families. Mitland was a bridegroom of less than a year, having married Miss Marjorie Case, co-ed and prominent in the younger social set.

The young hunters left their home early Monday without breakfast, saying they would be back by 9 o'clock. It is believed they fell through thin ice or went down in a small boat far out in Lake Michigan.

JACK SHARKEY IS MAN OF MYSTERY

Boston Fighter Keeps Ominously Quiet—Heeneey Will Beat Him, Champ Believes.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Quite some few people, including one in particular whom I modestly decline to mention, thought that Jack Sharkey couldn't lose the night he fought Dempsey or whatever it was he tried to do that night. Today, there are just as many who think he can't win when and if he meets Tom Heeneey on Jan. 13 and one of them apparently is a gentleman known as Gene Tunney, of whom one hears occasional references.

Mr. Tunney didn't express this view in public. It seems that he darkened the windows, stuffed the keyhole, glanced apprehensively to right, left and rear and, feeling secure against intrusion, imparted the good word to friends, who rushed from the premises in a body to impart it to the first gent they didn't know, who may or may not have been me. Anyhow, it appears that Tunney is looking forward to meeting Dempsey or Heeneey or both next summer for the heavyweight championship but not Sharkey.

Partial to Dempsey
In brief and if true, he has something in common with a lot of citizens who have come to look upon the modern Demosthenes as one who is all washed up, even unto the back of the ears.

It seems, too, that Tunney believes they can hold the Dempsey-Sharkey fight all over again for thirty nights a month and that the result would be much the same and even more than that. He is quoted as saying that he regards Dempsey as being Sharkey's master at all times after what happened last July. As to that, some people don't exactly know what happened last July. As to that, some people don't exactly know what happened yet, which isn't the point. Praise from Caesar, however, gauding, constitutes the point in question.

You might say that Tunney loves Dempsey like a brother, only he would have to be somebody else's.

However, the champion is only expressing once again what is a fairly general sentiment, except that it is probable he knows what he is talking about and the expressors of sentiment probably do not. The idea has become bruited about that the Dempsey defeat hurt Sharkey both internally and morally, which is taking in a lot of unexplored territory and only may have been somebody's bad guess in the first place.

May Fool Doubters
The lad may live to fool these doubters. He fooled us before against Dempsey. Maybe he will come out of the silence once again to fool the maulers of public opinion against Heeneey.

The source of the doubt surrounding his probably can be found in the fact that he has been ominously quiet these many months. He has said nothing and done nothing and has kept right on doing both and, somehow, the boys cannot figure that one out at a distance. It just doesn't seem right and so, in the natural course of human events, the gent has become a man of mystery and an object of very minute scrutiny.

He added to this by having the first Heeneey fight postponed. Yesterday, however, his manager, Johnny Buckley, told the boxing commission that Sharkey was ready, which was a rather favorable omen. Heretofore, Sharkey did all the telling and some of the fighting. Perhaps he has become reconciled now to doing only the latter.

MURPHY vs. WHITE
By DOC REID
Thirty-five years ago today, Billy Murphy, famous little New Zealander, who once won the diamond studded belt emblematic of the featherweight championship, fought a terrific 32 round draw with Tommy White, famous Chicago featherweight contender, at San Francisco.

White and Murphy were two of the greatest featherweight ringsters of all time and the affair created intense interest in fight circles. Murphy returned to his native country in 1904 and is still living there and in good health.

BANTAM KING WILL MEET OLD ENEMY

Bud Taylor to Step Out of Class to Give Battle To Tony Canzoneri.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(INS)—Though he is specializing at the present time in dealing to featherweights, Bud Taylor has no intention of forsaking the bantamweight division, over which he rules as champion in all boxing territory controlled by the National Boxing Association.

This does not include New York which is an exception not at all displeasing to Taylor since he can come in here and fight at catchweights, a privilege he would not enjoy if he were recognized as a champion. Under this dispensation Taylor will box his old rival, Tony Canzoneri, at the featherweight limit here next Friday night.

Canzoneri has abandoned the 118-pound class but Taylor says he can and will make that weight any time he is challenged by a worthy rival.

Eddie Long, Bud's manager, declared today that Taylor isn't fighting bantams now because there are no challengers who stand out.

"With Bushy Graham out of commission, Archie Bell just beaten by Kid Francis and Willie Smith taken by Dominick Petrone there isn't a bantam match that would draw any kind of a gate," Long said. "That is why Bud is mingling with the featherweights!"

From England comes the claim of discovery of a new heavyweight with championship possibilities.

It is an old story, but one to which an Englishman will ever lend a sympathetic ear.

If one of her explorers should discover both poles at once, old England could scarcely grant him more acclaim than awaits the discoverer of a British boxer capable of winning the heavyweight championship of the world.

The identity of the latest British aspirant is a closely guarded secret. Just why this should be necessary is not quite clear. Perhaps his backers fear that some third rate American fighter will walk up and slap him horizontal before he has been properly exploited.

It is barely possible that they consider this secrecy useful from a publicity point of view. Perish the thought.

If there were a real heavyweight anywhere in Great Britain he would be crated and rushed to Tex Richard forthwith and C. O. D.

The newcomer is a former office boy. That much, and a little more has been learned about him. Recently he was promoted to be a junior "clerk" in a city office, a position which entitles him to two celluloid collars and a little black "darby" hat, with spats, of course.

The potential champion is not yet 20. He has been boxing for several years, however, and recently stopped three amateurs in a single evening.

The training methods of "Kid X" are as mysterious as his identity.

During the lunch hour in the City, several boxers of repute hide themselves to the offices in which the junior clerk is employed and all descend to a basement, where the gloves are produced and the fun begins.

The youngster, it is said, (and this couldn't all be publicity chatter, could it?) takes on the others, one after another, each tiring rapidly under the strenuous attack of "Kid X." One 217 pound heavyweight is said to be unable to stay more than two rounds with our hero.

"Kid X" got his start in this same basement, when only an office boy. A clerk made some slighting remark which the humble office boy resented, and the pair vent downstairs to fight it out with the maulies. It was an easy first victory for "Kid X."

His firm promoted him, and apparently intends to continue to do so.

Jimmy J. Johnston, who doesn't care what he says as long as his name is spelled right, professes to believe that when Phil Scott returns to this country next year the Hackney Wick fire liddle can be made into a first rate fighter.

But it might be well to have Phil take on that mysterious office boy in the meantime.

Tickets are selling at a premium as only 5,700 spectators can be accommodated in the gymnasium.

Kearns Acquires Baker's Services for Sum of $25,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(INS)—The cauliflower market, which had a bull session with the purchase of Jack DeLaney by Joe Jacobs for $50,000, recorded a further rise today with the announcement that Jack Kearns, the dapper ex-manager of Jack Dempsey, had bought Sergeant Sammy Baker of Mitchell for $25,000.

The purchase of two prominent fighters, neither a champion, for such unprecedented sums within a week, has given the boxing business an unusual stimulus.

Baker, a welterweight who stopped Ace Hudkins of Nebraska, has for some time been regarded as Joe Dundee's most dangerous challenger for the 147-pound title. With Hudkins and Dundee prevented from meeting for the present by a ban imposed by the boxing authorities in California, it is believed that the astute Kearns hopes to force a title fight for his new purchase some time this winter.

GRID OFFICIALS DESIRE CHANGE IN GAME RULES

Football Arbiters Assert Fall Pastime Is Now Too Complicated by Laws.

By FRANK GETTY
U. P. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Football officials, who suffered so much abuse during the 1927 season, gathered today at the Hotel Astor to speak on their own behalf.

There was a time when the men in white knickers who officiated at the leading gridiron games were paid scanty attention by the partisan throngs gathered on respective sides of the chalk-line playing field.

This year, however, changes in the playing rules brought about an unprecedented number of situations in which the rulings of the officials had a most important bearing upon the result of the game.

Protests Aroused

There was the case of the Notre Dame-Southern California intersectional game, for instance, in which the decision of an umpire regarding a fumble behind the Irish goal line decided the contest in favor of the South Bend eleven and led to protests from the Trojans which have not yet died away.

Members of the football officials' association, who opened their annual session here today, blamed the complications of the new rules for their difficulties.

Football, from a game once decided obviously upon the merits of the respective contestants, has come to be a game where a delicate decision may be left up to some perplexed official.

Hairline Decisions

Take the case of the difference between a fumble and a muff, for which the 1927 rules provide.

A muff by a quarterback receiving a punt occurs when the receiver never actually obtains possession of the ball. A fumble occurs when he first possesses and then drops it.

Obviously this requires, on occasions, hair-line decisions by the official responsible, and whatever is decided, players, spectators and occasionally other officials, are dissatisfied.

The question of timing the huddle, the shift and unnecessary delay also troubles many of the football officials who gathered at the hotel Astor today.

Game Complicated

Tom Thorp, Walter Eckersall, Dave Schultz and other well-known officials whose services are in demand for the leading games, were unanimous in expressing the opinion that the game has become too complicated from the officials' point of view and that too much responsibility is placed upon the arbiters.

The officials will recommend to the rules committee, which meets here tomorrow, that the rules be simplified.

In one sense, they will have the entire support of the football coaches association, which also meets here the following day. The coaches, naturally, are not worried about the difficulties of the officials, but feel that the new rules have made the gridiron game complicated to a point where it is difficult to teach it thoroughly to boys of college age in the given time.

FARMER EVER AT WAR

WHILE farming is apparently the most peaceful of pursuits, in reality the farmer is everlastingly at war. Not with his fellowmen, but with the billions of insects and other animal life which menace his crops on every hand.

The boll weevil, the army worm, the corn borer, the gypsy moth, the cabbage butterfly and other hordes of insects and parasites are working day and night to set his best efforts to naught. And each of these enemies presents a distinct problem.

Without scientific aid in fighting insects, it is asserted by high authorities that in time human life would become extinct. The insects and parasites would completely overrun the earth.

It is some comfort to know, then, that under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture, earnest scientists are working diligently to find better means of controlling these pests, and are meeting with a fair degree of success.

Information of the utmost value to the farmer is available through the county farm agents, bulletins from government sources, articles by experts published in the press, and the example of informed neighbors. He owes it to himself to profit by this information and cooperate with these agencies which stand ready to aid him in his warfare against destructive insect pests.

MARIE LEARNS ABOUT FAME

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD Marie Antrim, after her brief hour of glory in Chicago, where she was crowned health queen of the United States, is back on the farm in Kingman county, Kansas, her education well under way.

The education we speak of is coming to Marie through the mails, which bring her every sort of interesting whatnot. A tooth paste manufacturer is interested in knowing what kind of tooth paste Marie uses. A health food manufacturer asks her if she ever used the kind his company makes. Congratulatory letters come from here and there, from governors and politicians and health and social organizations.

A number of other Antrims from other parts of the country are trying to trace some relationship with this girl. They want her to tell them about her paternal grandparents and where her paternal grandparents' father was born.

One odd lack noted—there have been no mash notes or proposals of marriage for Marie thus far. Perhaps that is because Marie didn't wear a bathing suit when she was having her picture taken—perhaps it is because her healthy, wholesome appearance, scared away this class of trade.

Marie is taking it all philosophically, helping her mother with farm duties, attending high school, being the same girl she always was, and reading plenty of mail.

WIPING OUT POVERTY

HOPE that poverty would eventually be abandoned, as the result of good management of business and increased production, was expressed by Dean Kimball of Cornell University, at the convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. The tremendous output of our products is abolishing poverty, he said.

To abolish poverty, however, people have to learn to restrain themselves. No family will get far along the road out of poverty if its members are spending money too freely on pleasures, or throwing it away on dissipation. Some people think, if money comes easily for a time, it will always do so. But sad experience teaches that such prosperity is a fleeting thing. The time when money is easily earned is the time to salt much of it away against future needs.

THE OLD YEAR

Now here's
The old
Year slipping
By,
And somehow I can't Help but sigh,
I planned a million
Things to do
But I've neglected
Them all, too—
It's funny how this
Old world goes,
We plant a thorn,
Expect a rose,
We hope for things,
And that is all
We do not hear
Ambition's call
We linger at the Starting place
Forgetting
That
There is a race
And others
Start and win
Their goal—
Ah, we are but
A mournful
Soul!
And so it goes,
The old year
Dies
And leaves behind
A million sighs—
But just you wait,
The coming year
I'll win my point,
And without Fear—

And what we mean to say
Is,
"Just wait!"—you say,
And wait we do,
And we'll be waiting
Each year, too—
The man who says,
"I'll do this thing,
Tomorrow I will Spread my wing!"
Soon finds Tomorrow
Is Today
And that he's failed
Along the way.

ONE SUBJECT ON WHICH THEY AGREE

President Coolidge Prefers to Watch the Shavings Curl and Fly Back in the Old Vermont Home.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.
United States Senator from New York.

MR. COOLIDGE says he "does not choose to run for President." When asked what he would do on retiring from the White House, his reply was, "Well, I am going back to Vermont and for a year or two I am going to whittle."

If you were born in the country, you know exactly what President Coolidge meant. You know the joy of "sittin' around" and just whittling.

No angry, irritated, cross, vindictive person can whittle. It is the calm, contented, right thinking individual who does this. It gives a man a chance to think and dream and compose his soul.

The Presidency is a grueling, exacting, trying, body wracking and mind smashing job. I can well understand that Mr. Coolidge wants a rest. He needs it. It will take a year or two of quiet and many days of whittling to restore his physical vigor and rest his tired brain. I sincerely hope the President will employ his first leisure in just this sensible way.

Why don't you do a little whittling? Do you ever relax? How often do you give body and soul a complete rest? An hour of placid, leisurely whittling every day would add years to your expectation of life. I look in pity upon some of my friends who play golf two or three times a week, doing so upon the theory that it is good for them. But how do they do it?

These fine men rush through the day's work, on edge to get through in time to catch the four o'clock train. Under pressure of hurry they get short and cross, spoiling the tempers of their associates.

All out of breath they catch the last car of the express. Hot and sticky and worn out they reach the club house. They get into golf tows like a fireman dons his uniform for a three-alarm fire. Rushing to the links they smash into the game as if launching a lifeboat to save a man from drowning.

After visiting the nineteenth hole and eating a tremendous dinner, it is counted a "great day." Well, it is a great day—for the undertaker.

Do you imagine that is good for health? It is not. Golf is a wonderful game and capable of adding to the joy and length of life, but not when played like this.

Unless you can play the game in a more leisurely and a more casual way, it will do you harm instead of good. Apply a little common sense to your recreations and they will mean more to you.

Invite your soul now and again by a period of absolute relaxation. Buy a good strong pocket knife and a stick of soft pine. With every long curly shingle will come a revived and rejuvenated nerve cell. Good luck to you, Mr. Coolidge!

Answers to Health Queries

L. L. Q.—What do you advise for a cold in my head and throat?

2.—What is the cause and remedy for brown blemishes on my face?

A.—Colds are usually caused by a run-down state of health. Try to build up your general health and you may not be so susceptible to colds. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2.—Liver spots are due to more or less poor intestinal elimination. The first thing to do, therefore, is to correct constipation. Particulars sent upon receipt of a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Repeat your question.

W. S. Q.—What do you advise for a discharging ear?

A.—This condition should have personal medical attention.

P. S. Q.—In what part of the neck is the jugular vein located?

A.—Deep in the neck.

"That's where those planes went that were flapping around over us," said Eadie. "I'm glad they left us alone this afternoon. Planes are bad stuff."

"Well, shoot me a rocket," ordered the captain. Eadie consulted the code and then handed it to Jake.

"You might as well get some instruction," said the sergeant. "If I'm hit, you'll have to carry on. Hunt in the code for an S. O. S. signal and then shoot it. Here's the pistol."

Jake selected a rocket and putting it into the pistol, snapped the apparatus shut and, extending his arm, sent the signal sailing.

"They'll see it," said Eadie, "yellow smoke, at a height of seventy-five yards. There's a parachute holds it up and it stays up there about ten seconds. Look, captain, if there are any units too close to the boggy, they'd better pull back because the barrage might fall a little short."

"Small chance," replied the captain. "We're still the farthest advanced of the units of this division. The division's only got about a mile and a half of front. You'd think we could get on faster. Where's your barrage?"

"It takes a minute or two to figure the fire dope and lay the guns," said Eadie. "It'll take 'em some time to get started because they'll have to dope out what the rocket means."

Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed. The German fire, in view of the fact that the Americans were not advancing, began to slacken.

"Fire another rocket, Jake," directed Eadie.

"Which one?" asked Jake. "Why, the same kind that you fired the last time, hammerhead!"

"I don't know what kind it was," muttered Jake.

"Why, you picked it out of the book and then off the pile all yourself." "Naw," grinned Jake slyly. "I seen the one you was going to put in the pistol but laid down again when you give me the book, and I picked that one up and fired it."

"By G—d, you're learning to be an observer, anyway," said Eadie. "Listen, nitwit. The rocket you want is a yellow smoke. Well, hunt around in your pockets and see if you've got a yellow smoke. It's marked on the bottom of the cartridge."

Jake hunted, but after he had taken out all his rockets and laid them in a neat row in front of him, as Eadie

had done with his, he could not find what he sought.

"Aw, what the h—l does 'fumee John' mean to me?" cried Jake. "I'm a white man. I don't savvy no frog lingo."

"Shoot the rocket!" said Eadie.

Away went the rocket and while it was still in air, shells began to burst in front. They did not form a hurricane of fire by any means, but they made a comfortable noise. Eadie, counting the bursts, decided that a battalion, three batteries, was firing.

"About ten minutes or so of this and we can advance again," said the captain cheerfully.

It is a heart warming thing to have a barrage arrive in answer to a rocket. So many times a whole dump full of rockets is fired and the barrage is nonexistent. And other times the barrage lands in astonishing places, anywhere but where it will do good. But this one was well placed, it was enthusiastic, and the infantry watched it with pleasure. Between the barrage and the one-pounders and machine guns the Germans would have to pull out, or be killed.

A half hour the barrage continued to play, then suddenly stopped. The infantry, without waiting for the order, sprang forward, struggled through some half destroyed wire and found themselves in the intermediate position. It was empty. Of the defenders of the trench there was no sign. There were neither wounded nor dead. And the fire of the German machine gunners, that had been so long quiet, once more began with redoubled fury.

"Well, let's keep going!" yelled the captain. "Don't stop here! They've pulled out, men, let's get after them!" The officers with the companies urged their men forward and the battalion climbed out of the rear wall of the system and went on.

The battalion staff followed the advance, hurried from one flank of the battalion to the other and directed the placing of the one-pounder when any place appeared that looked as though it might be occupied. The staff was not unwieldy, for it consisted only of Captain Lawrence, Sergeant Eadie, Jake, and a runner from Captain Lawrence's company.

The captain pulled men from holes and shoved them forward with his hands. He personally directed the surrounding and capture of a light machine gun that was all that was left of a strong point organized in some artificially deepened and connected shell holes. The captain had no tactical plan of advance. His only idea was to keep the men going forward. Their objective was still a long way off, but he had hopes of its achievement during the night.

At sunset the battalion had progressed to where they could look down a funnel-shaped valley in the woods on their left. This valley was strongly organized by the enemy, for the infantry now received a heavier fire than any they had yet experienced. Here Captain Lawrence was hit in the arm, but beyond putting on a bandage he paid it no attention. He was hit again five minutes later, on the same wrist.

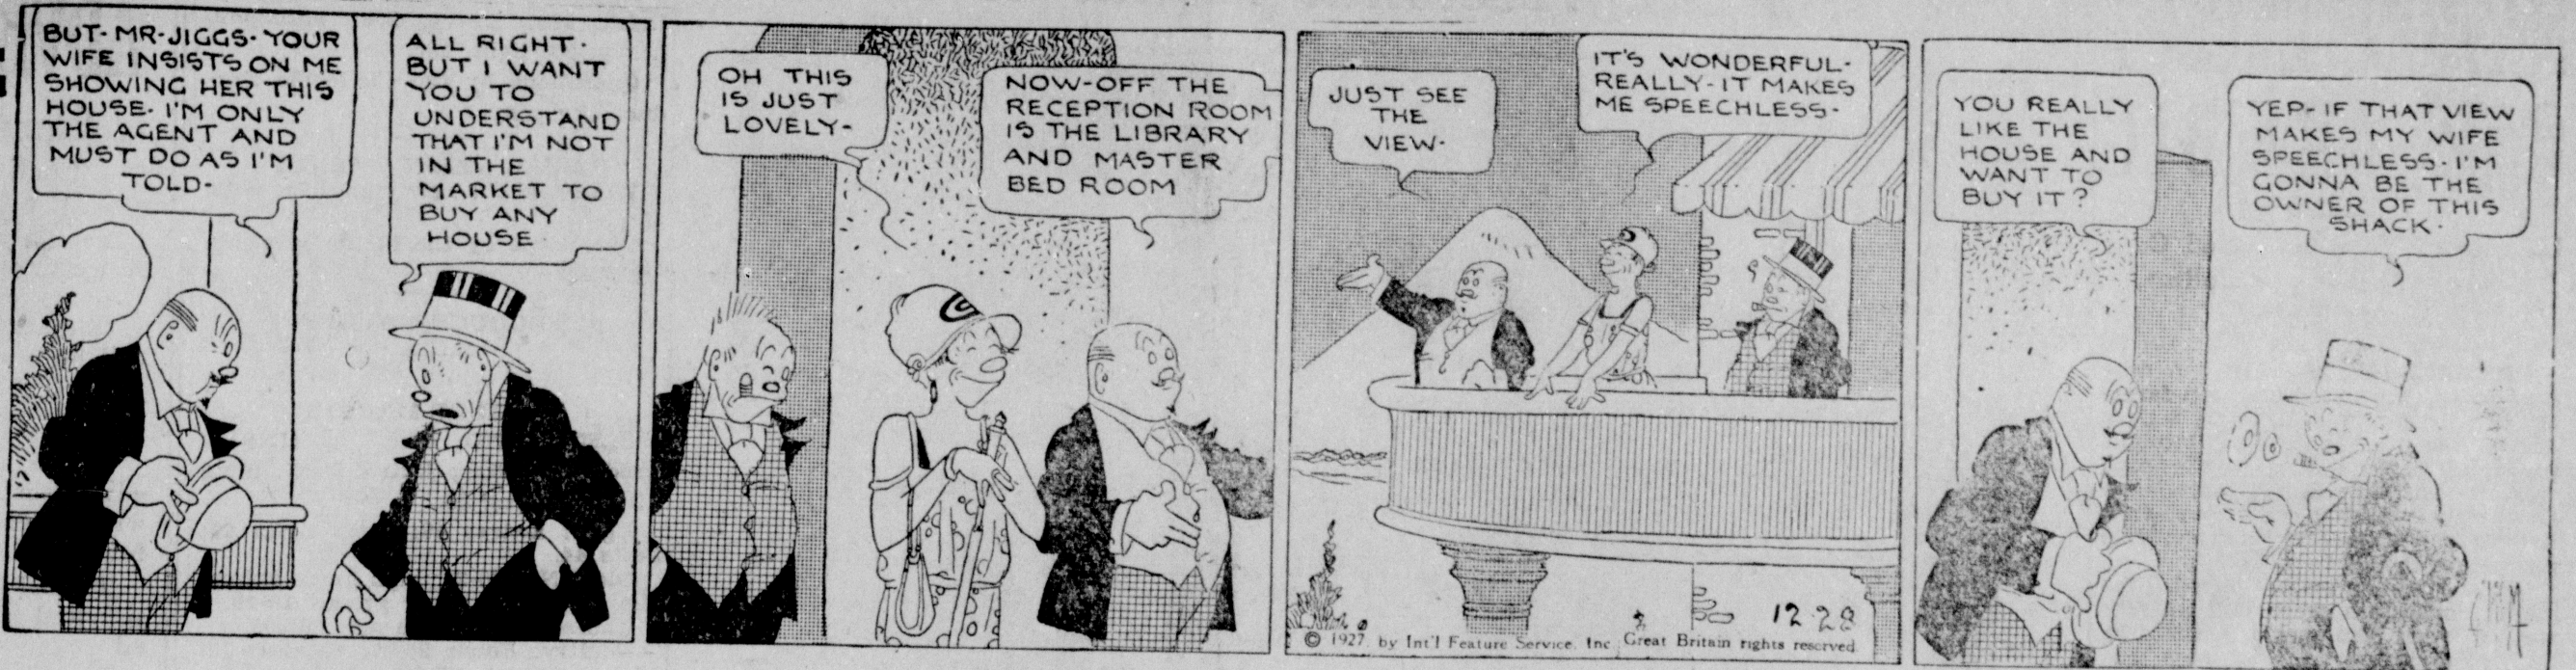

"They've spotted the staff," said Eadie. "They can see us running around and waving our hands."

"Look at those sons of — in the hole over there!" cried the captain. "That's what disgusts me!" He pointed with his good arm to a half dozen gallant defenders of democracy who had huddled into a shell hole and, having allowed the advance to pass them, now began to timidly make their way out with every intention of breaking for the rear and safety.

PHILADELPHIA EXPECTS TO BE SMOKELESS CITY

Tests Being Made by School of Medicine to Determine Amount of Sunshine.

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28.—Tests to determine the amount of sunshine in Philadelphia are being conducted here under the auspices of the School of Medicine of Temple University and the National Conference Board of Sanitation. The experiments are expected to result in a realization of the dream of health enthusiasts—a smokeless city.

The researches are being made by Dr. Frank Hammond Krusen, Associate Dean of the Temple School of Medicine. An intricate electrical device, designed to keep an accurate record of the city's sunlight, has been installed upon the roof of the medical school building in the central part of the city while a similar instrument has been placed atop the Abington Memorial Hospital on the outskirts of the city.

At the Abington institution the machine is expected to prove conclusively that suburban dwellers derive the full healthful benefit of the actinic rays of the sunlight, because in the outlying sections the rays are not filtered by smoke clouds.

out, undoubtedly will add valuable contributions to the scientific knowledge of the relationship between sunlight and health. When this data has been compiled, he said, it will be submitted to the city health authorities, and it is probable that out of the investigations will emerge an official committee of medical men and engineers who will make practical recommendations for the absolute elimination of the smoke nuisance. Dr. Krusen is also director of public health of Philadelphia.

"The invisible ultra-violet light from the sun, it has been conclusively demonstrated, kills germs," Dr. Krusen said, "abundance of light prevents eyestrain, promotes cleanliness, increases production, and prevents industrial accidents. The infra-red rays (or heat rays) are today effectively used in treating certain disorders of the body. Science is beginning to realize we are jeopardizing the healthy growth of all living things by living in smoke-filled communities. In this city we are not only cut off from much sunlight, but we are also deprived of the health-giving rays in the sunlight we have. The next step in the promotion of community health lies in a better understanding of the action of sunlight. The study which we are undertaking will help toward that end."

U. S. Cooperates
The two recorders are sufficiently close to each other to measure accurately the amount of daylight lost in the city, through the presence of smoke, dust, gas fumes and the like.

The United States Public Health Service is cooperating in this work and Dr. James E. Ives, Government Illumination Expert and Physicist to the United States Public Health Service, has recently completed the calibration of the recorders for a comparison of the records.

While no definite figures are available at this time estimates show that at least thirty per cent of sunlight is lost in the center of the city.

Dr. Krusen believes that a definite relation between lack of daylight and epidemics of disease will be established and that these machines will prove beyond the question of a doubt that the city dweller is losing much of the health-giving sunlight which is rightfully his.

Kiss No Light Matter With Early Christians

Among the early Christians the kiss of peace was a sacred ceremony, observed upon their most solemn occasions. It was called the seal of prayer, and was a symbol of that mutual forgiveness and reconciliation which the church required, as an essential condition before anyone was admitted to the sacraments.

The Roman civilians at length took the kiss under their protection. Their code defined the nature, limits, incidents and such like of the "right of kissing."

The kiss had all the virtue of a bond, granted as a seal to the ceremony of betrothing; and if the husband-elect broke the engagement, repenting of what he had done, he surrendered a moiety of the presents received in the ceremony of betrothing, in consequence of the violence done to the modesty of the lady by a kiss.

In much later times the kiss was esteemed to be a ceremony of particular obligation. Julia, in "Two Gentlemen of Verona," after exchanging a ring with her lover, completes the contract by a kiss:

"And seal the bargain with a holy kiss."

The last instance in which the kiss formed the subject of serious regulation was when the Empress Catherine of Russia instituted assemblies of men and women to promote the cultivation of polite manners. Among the rules she directed that "no gentleman should force a kiss from or strike a woman in the assembly, under pain of exclusion."

WET NEW YEAR IS ANTICIPATED FOR NEW YORK

Excessive Merrymaking, Much Drunkenness Predicted by Broadway Experts.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.
NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—New Year's Eve will be at wet—and no doubt as deadly—as any since the Volstead law was placed on the statute books.

Broadway predicts that the merrymaking will be excessive and unrestrained; so do the bootleggers, the cabaret proprietors and the speak-easies.

Indications are that the undertaking business will pick up on or about the first of the year.

Sixteen deaths from high-powered Christmas hootch have occurred in and around New York City, and the victims are dying one and two at a time. Hospitals are filled with scores of half dead drinkers. But this situation is not going to deter thousands of others from going on one grand spree next Saturday night.

Signs Infallible
Hotels report the infallible sign of the forthcoming "big night"—a tremendous eleventh hour rush for table reservations. The same condition prevails in the cabarets and road houses. All the twenty-nine ballrooms of the Hotel Astor have been reserved. The Hotel McAlpin plans to entertain 5,000 revelers. The Ambassador, the Sherry-Netherland, the Savoy-Plaza, the Roosevelt and other hostilities have arranged special programs. Supper prices range from $10 to $20 a plate.

Greenwich Village cabarets have jacked up their prices something fearful, and it will cost a small fortune to show a sizable party a good time at the nearby roadhouses.

Bootleggers are all set for a killing. They are assuring their public that they can supply all the booze that is needed to insure a carousal befitting the occasion.

Ginger Ale Scarce
Night clubs, in some instances, are finding it harder to get ginger ale than booze. Bootleggers have started to handle the better brands of ginger ale. This will be hard on the pocket-books of the clients. And, incidentally, a survey of the night club reservations shows that the out-of-town visitors will be in the majority at the Broadway celebration.

Prohibition agents, meanwhile, are devising ways and means to cope with the jollification. They are greatly outnumbered and, before the big night is over, may need the cooperation of the police.

Baby 1928 is bound to hear a mighty splash and many strange noises when he opens his eyes next Saturday midnight.

Courts Uphold Cow's Right to Costly Path

Chicago has a $2,000,000 monument to a cow in the form of a 22-story office building. A clause in the deed of the site of the new building necessitated a clever bit of cantilever construction in order to have the upper 21 stories 10 feet wider than the first floor.

It seems that years ago a Doctor Bassett owned the site and an adjoining site upon which he had his cow barn. The former became desirable for business, but the doctor would not sell it unless it was stipulated in the deed that a ten-foot strip along the west end of the lot be kept perpetually free for passage, so that his cow could travel back and forth to pasture freely. Despite the fact that several attempts have been made to nullify the clause, the courts uphold it. Thus Chicago's claim of being the only city respecting the humble cow with a $2,000,000 tribute.

GRAIN CROPS OF NATION, EXCEPT OATS, ARE BIG

Miracle of Weather Saved Corn Farmers Millions of Dollars, Survey Shows.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—(UP)—A miracle of weather saved the corn farmers of the country millions of dollars during the past year and brought prosperity to the west. All grain crops with the exception of oats were large and prices in all but corn moved in a narrow range, making for a stable market for the farmers.

While the farmers gained, the market operators were not entirely pleased with the performances in 1927. Features were lacking as prices in all but corn swung through a narrow arc. Government regulation played its part in reducing manipulation and this factor brought a reduction in volume of business.

Irregularity in corn was the one feature. Heavy selling of the cereal during the early months of the year caused a declining market which continued into April. May found the market oversold and an upturn started which did not end until August. Weather conditions, which prevented early planting and caused a gloomy outlook for the corn crop, reversed themselves in the fall and exceptionally hot weather brought out a bumper crop. Prices fell in proportion to the volume of the crop, but the farmers profited nevertheless.

Corn prices for the December delivery ranged from 80 3-4 cents a bushel to $1.20 1-4 with a drop from the high point nearly to the low of last spring. May 1928 corn ranged from 87 1-2c to $1.06 3-4. December wheat ranged between $1.21 1-8 to $1.50 3-4 while the May 1928 delivery since it has been on the board had only an 11 cent range, showing the narrow character of the trading.

Another season of big production in winter wheat is indicated by the seeding of a much larger acreage of winter wheat, private estimates of the increase running from 6 to nearly 10 per cent.

The end of the year finds the general situation in regard to the handling of cash grain satisfactory but with much to be desired in the speculative trade.

WENT TO HER GODS IN REGAL SPLENDOR

Luxurious Surroundings for Dead Viking Ruler.

A royal pleasure ship, last resting place of Queen Aasa, a ruler of the Vikings, is one of the most remarkable finds ever made in old graves. At least this is the verdict of Sophie Gram, who in the journal of the Archaeological Society of Washington, Art and Archeology, describes the splendor with which this queen of about 800 A. D. was prepared for her "voyage" to meet the Norse gods.

It was a natural idea to the Vikings that their last journey would take them over the sea, Miss Gram explains. A king or queen was buried not only with the necessities for a long voyage, but with the luxuries which royalty, even among the hardy Norsemen, have always commanded. A ship, carriage and four sleighs, all beautifully carved, went into the queen's burial mound to assure her of fitting transportation wherever her death voyage might take her.

"The interment of Queen Aasa was attended by great splendor," she says. "Lavish offerings, the rumors of which spread far abroad, were made at the grave. In her honor fifteen horses, four dogs and one ox were sacrificed. On board the vessel the queen was surrounded by a luxury which is astounding for those days. In the grave was placed her bed with down pillows and feather quilts. The walls of the burial chamber were covered with costly rugs from foreign countries, as well as with hangings, woven by the queen herself and her maidens, and dyed with vegetable colors.

"She had with her lamps, sewing equipment and all imaginable personal things, such as clothes and linen, kitchen utensils, chests with jewelry, also vegetables and grain. For entertainment there were chessboards, delectables with wine, walnuts and wild apples.

"Her closest bondwoman went with her to death. She had to give up her life in order that the queen should have company on the way to Valhalla. Perhaps she was killed according to the sacrificial ceremonies before being taken on board. But she may have gone into the grave to sit down beside her dead mistress, guarding her last sleep until her own life slowly ebbed out."

The finding of this ship and of the ship in which Queen Aasa's husband was buried strongly refutes the idea, so generally entertained, that the people from Viken were semibarbarous, Miss Gram points out.

The Oseberg ship, as Queen Aasa's craft is called, has been carefully restored and is now in the historical museum at Oslo.

Only Took 62 Years for Him to Get His Congressional Medal of Honor

After 62 years of waiting, Charles F. Hopkins, of Boonton, N. J., has finally received the Congressional Medal of Honor that he earned for conspicuous gallantry under fire during the Civil War.

However, don't blame the Government for the delay.

Mr. Hopkins could have had the medal, as well as the citation for distinguished bravery, 62 years ago. But he's a mighty modest man and was reluctant to apply personally for the honor.

NEW RECEIVERS OMIT ALL BATTERIES

Ordinary Lighting Circuits Bring Complete Socket Power to Receivers at a Cost Within Reach of All; Many Improvements in Dry Batteries.

New broadcast receivers which operate in connection with either alternating or direct current supplied by the house lighting mains, thereby dispensing with all batteries, and newly designed sets for dry battery and storage battery operation, were announced by E. E. Bucher, Assistant Vice-President of the Radio Corporation of America, in a statement to the public.

"The Radio Corporation of America long ago discerned a well-defined public demand and preference for radio receivers utilizing lighting current as the source of power to do away with all batteries and the need for their periodical replacement," said Mr. Bucher. "The new receivers therefore now bring complete socket power operated receivers within the reach of every purse and home, and for the millions of homes in communities not yet electrified there is provided the last word in dry battery and storage battery operated sets. They include numerous refinements as well as ingenious combinations in keeping with the growing importance of radio in the home; but the sound value of basic research and true engineering is borne out once more in the survival of certain definite fundamentals of radio reception which the Radio Corporation introduced several years ago and which remain unsurpassed," continued Mr. Bucher. "Perhaps the outstanding feature of the new models is in the perfected method of light socket operation which they embody, although tonal quality has been further improved. Beautiful cabinets with the radio components entirely self-contained yet made readily available by convenient doors, now place Radiolas on a par with the finest of home furnishings."

Superheterodyne Still Standard

The leaders continue to be represented by an 8-tube, loop-operated superheterodyne receiver—and a socket-powered loudspeaker of surpassing tone and volume, together with complete rectifier supply for the A, B, and C requirements of the Radiola with which it is used in combination. Mr. Bucher's announcement continues: "Either in the form of separate units or incorporated in one cabinet, the best features of this combination have been retained in some of the models introduced. Certain refinements in design have permitted the inclusion of the powerful 104 Loudspeaker in one cabinet with the super-sensitive superheterodyne, with a complete absence of microphonic effects, but which in fact emphasizes its extraordinary tone quality.

"In another model, but likewise characterized by a distinctive cabinet and entirely self-contained equipment, is incorporated the well-known 8-tube superheterodyne receiver with the new 100-A loudspeaker, and operated by socket power.

"The superheterodyne circuit therefore continues as the standard of broadcast perfection after four years in the hands of the critical radio public. This circuit, quite as much as any

"Of revolutionary character is the introduction of a new model which is the culmination of years of research in set and tube design aimed to produce, for a moderate price, a receiver completely AC operated with a minimum of operating controls. Simplicity of operation and of maintenance are its main features. It has three stages of radio-frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio-frequency amplification. The new AC Radiotrons UX-226 are used in the radio-frequency stages and in the first audio-frequency stage. The new AC Radiotron UX-227 is used as a detector, and the last audio-frequency stage employs a UX-171 power amplifier Radiotron. The 'B' and 'C' voltages are obtained from a power supply unit built into the set, which employs the new high-power rectifier, Radiotron UX-230—full wave rectifier. There are only three controls on this set, one knob for tuning, one for volume control to regulate the output of the receiver and a power control switch to turn the power on and off.

"For those who prefer battery operation or whose homes are located in districts not as yet electrified, there is introduced a receiver that will be found to fill the most rigid requirements for sensitivity, selectivity and fine tone quality in its class. This is a new uni-control six-tube receiver employing the well-known and perfected tuned radio-frequency circuit with three stages of radio-frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio-frequency, taking five UX-201-A Radiotrons and one UX-112 power amplifier Radiotron. The internal construction of the set is extremely rugged, and with simplicity of operation are the two keynotes of this receiver.

To Continue Rural Sets

"In response to public demand, especially in rural districts, the Radio Corporation of America will continue their five-tube tuned radio-frequency receiver employing regeneration, and which provides unusual sensitivity and selectivity. It uses four UX-199 Radiotrons and a power amplifier Radiotron UX-120, in the last audio stage, giving excellent and undistorted musical reproduction.

"The loudspeaker 104, in addition to the present well-known AC model, is now to be presented in a DC model as well, thus making this superior radio device available in cities and hotels and institutions which are supplied with 110 volt direct current. An ingenious design provides this DC 104 with all the power and tone quality of the tried, tested and perfected AC model.

"As a loudspeaker particularly intended for operation with Radiolas and all other receivers operating on batteries and moderate socket-power, Loudspeaker 100-A is included among the new models. Its enclosed cone is of a design suggestive of a mandolin, with a screen bezel, the whole finished in dull bronze."

Temper

"Moses," says a learned preacher, had one great fault and it kept him out of the promised land. He never learned to control his temper." And Moses is a good "bad example." The lack of self-control keeps otherwise good men and women forever out of the land of promise. Without self-control all other good qualities are built on the sand.

Aviation Movements

The Army Air corps says that airplanes can fly upside down for several miles, the exact number depending upon the make of the plane. Very few airplanes can fly in this position without losing altitude. The aviator is enabled to determine the position of his plane by means of a "turn and bank" indicator.

Department of Agriculture Expert Urges Use of Sound Business Methods.

Cooperative marketing is a business enterprise and must prove its value through the adoption and practice of sound business methods. J. W. Jones of the United States Department of Agriculture told cooperative leaders of Ohio who attended a series of cooperative institutes held during the past two weeks at Toledo, Cleveland, and Cincinnati. Cooperative marketing has often been sold on the basis of prejudice or promises rather than for exactly what it can and should accomplish, he maintained. Improved quality of product offered the consumer is one of the chief aims of the cooperative and cooperative handling brings a greater opportunity to accomplish this improvement than any other system of marketing, Mr. Jones believes.

The goal of cooperative marketing may be to reduce the costs of getting products to market. It may seek to reduce margins, to increase quality or to provide better marketing service. L. G. Foster of the rural economics department of Ohio State University told the same groups. It may be a combination of all of these goals, but whether one or all of them are sought, they must be kept in mind constantly. Some cooperatives have followed the call of expediency at the sacrifice of progress toward these goals, he said.

B. B. Mason of the auditing department of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation pointed out the importance of adequate auditing and accounting for cooperatives and the responsibility of the directors to direct commodity associations on the basis of such knowledge.

While cooperative marketing is a business enterprise, the human element of the organization must not be overlooked, and the development of organization consciousness through information is important, according to Dewey Head of the Federation.
